House Defeats Military Pay Raise Bill

Democrats Plan Debate On D.C. Rule This Week

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Senate Democratic leadership is now driving to bring up the Washington home-rule bill for debate Friday or early next week.

Hopes for early Senate action on the measure rose yesterday following general agreement by the Democratic Policy Committee that the bill be brought promptly to a vote.

Senate Majority Leader Lucas (Ill.) told reporters there was a "very possible chance" home rule will be debated at the end of this week.

The home-rule question came up for lengthy discussion in the Democratic steering committee when Senators J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) and Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) made a joint appeal to the group for an early go-ahead signal.

Taft Promises Action

Home-rule advocates won new hope also from the Republican side of the aisle yesterday.

GOP Policy Committee Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio) said he would again sound out his colleagues on their sentiments for early action on home rule.

He said he did not expect much opposition from Republican Senators.

Both Senators Kefauver and McGrath told the Democratic policy group that they thought a home-rule vote could be reached after no more than two days' floor debate.

Lucas said this week's Senate program would be: finish up the pending unification bill, then go to the central intelligence agency measure, and the basing-point price bill and home rule the end of the week.

Trade Bill on Schedule

The leadership is aiming to start reciprocal trade consideration next Tuesday if Finance Committee Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) is back in the Senate by that time. George is in Bethesda Naval Hospital for a physical checkup.

Before the Democratic policy meeting yesterday, representatives of four local groups, urging home rule, had lunch at the Capitol with six Senators.

Purpose of the meeting was to discuss strategy for pushing the bill to a vote.

Senator Kefauver presided at the meeting, also attended by Senators Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), Theodore F. Green (D., R. I.), Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.).

Hunt suggested to the group that an official half holiday in the District to make possible a march on the Capitol would be a "very effective way to dramatize local interest in the measure."

Victor Reuther, Walter's Brother, Shot at Home

Detroit, May 24 (AP).—Victor Reuther, brother of Walter P. Reuther UAW-CIO president, was shot and seriously wounded by an unknown assailant tonight. First police reports said he was shot in the face.

Police said Reuther was shot through a window of his home.

This was the same way his brother, Walter, was shot the night of April 20 last year.

Lieut B. J. Greiner of the dectective bureau at police headquarters said shortly after the shooting was reported that he had "no clews."

Reuther is educational director of the auto union.

"We're trying to pick up what we can," Greiner said.

The wounded man was taken to Receiving Hospital in the suburb of Redford.

The shooting of Walter Reuther has never been solved. At the time he blamed it on "Communists, management or a crackpot."

Drive Is Begun On Hill to Quit About July 31

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A leadership drive to adjourn Congress sine die about July 31 by postponing action on many key points in the Truman program developed at the Capitol yesterday.

The drive, announced after a White House conference, at least tacitly involves shelving national health insurance, tax, civil rights, the foreign arms program and several other major measures until the 1950 campaign year.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) narrowed the Senate "must" list to only three major bills after the leadership huddle: reciprocal trade extension, repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and ratification of the North Atlantic Treaty.

If the Senate passes these three by July 31, plus "one or two" others and the regular appropriation bills, Lucas said he thought "the disposition of Congress will be to adjourn."

"The President's program is rather extensive and covers considerable territory," said Lucas. "It all can't be passed overnight . . . There are good things in it we can save until next year."

Americans for Democratic Action, representing the New Deal wing of the party, promptly protested the plan. The ADA said it is "more than a flag of surrender; it is a flat betrayal of the Democratic Party platform."

"It will come as a great shock to the Nation that Administration leaders have abandoned all thought of enacting civil rights and major social measures," said Joseph L. Rauh, jr., chairman of ADA's executive committee.

"The enactment of civil rights, health legislation, improved minimum wage laws, decent tax program and countless other measures was originally scheduled as the first order of business—not the last."

Senator Lucas disclosed the outlines of the adjournment push on

Former 'Blue Babies' Are Exhibits In Unclaimed Animal Bill Battle

Doctors yesterday declared the animal vivisection issue was essentially a matter of human or dogs' lives, while anti-vivisectionists countered with charges of cruelty in the medical laboratories.

The battle of words was waged in a day-long hearing before a special Senate District Subcommittee on a bill to permit local medical institutions to obtain unclaimed dogs from the District pound.

The testimony before an emotional audience of more than 200 onlookers was highlighted by:

1. Presentation of three Washington former "blue babies" to the Senate group as evidence in support of the use of dogs in medical research.

Dr. Alfred Blalock, surgeon-in-chief of Johns Hopkins Hospital and codeveloper of the "blue baby" operation, said that without scientific research on dogs, the operation would not have been perfected.

2. Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), himself a surgeon and sponsor of a similar House bill, revealed that he had received a letter threatening his life. He said the FBI had tracked down the author of the letter and that it was written when the writer was drunk.

3. C. E. Richards, director of the National Anti-Vivisection Society of Chicago, told the hearing that District people would not turn in stray dogs to the pound if the bill became law.

When Richards told the committee he doubted the "necessity" of dogs for medical experimentation, Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), a committee member, interjected:

"You heard the testimony of Dr. Blalock that research on dogs led to the blue baby operation and that since then Johns Hopkins has performed more than 800 such successful operations.

"Are you then taking the position that dogs' are more important than human lives?" asked Hunt. "It seems to me you are taking that position."

Richards denied the issue was that finely drawn.

The former "blue baby" children whom Dr. Blalock put on the witness stand, and on whom he had operated, were Margaret Belkov, 6, of 619 16th st. ne.; Robert Wildrick, 5, of 2501 14th st. nw. and Eugene Golsen, 13, of 9206 Wire ave., Silver Spring, Md.

Dr. Blalock said he was able to develop the blue baby operation after experimenting on 75 dogs.

On four occasions, Subcommittee Chairman Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) had to bang her gavel to restore order.

Edwin W. Hadley, a Boston lawyer, led off the parade of anti-vivisection witnesses, charging the bill a "pro-theft" proposition. He held that the measure violates the concept of private property and the so-called doctrine of "presumed intention" of dog owners. It provides a means of legalized theft, he said.

An investigator for the District Aantivivisection Society—James F. Cunningham—told the committee that "dognaping" and subsequent sale to medical institutions was a big business in the Washington area.

As a means of stopping the "lucrative dog-procuring business" here, Cunningham suggested medical laboratories demand "very specific" bills of sale when they receive a shipment of dogs.

Senator McGrath asked the witness if he thought the pending bill might curtail dognaping.

Cunningham replied that it would, but his society would rather cope with dognaping than see a measure pass that legalizes animal vivisection.

Near the close of the hearing, Owen B. Hunt of the American Anti-Vivisection Society in Philadelphia, brought sobs from many spectators when he produced a

Lilienthal Admits Error In U-235 Loss

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Chairman David E. Lilienthal yesterday acknowledged that the Atomic Energy Commission's Argonne Laboratory had committed "a substantial error" in letting seven weeks pass before notifying the FBI of the disappearance of an ounce of U-235.

AEC General Manager Carroll L. Wilson told the Senate Appropriations Committee that the Commission's own regulations called for a prompt notification of the FBI in the case of a violation or suspected violation of the Commission's own security regulations.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) pressed Lilienthal as to whether the delay in notifying the FBI was not a violation of congressional statute requiring such notification.

"It was an error and a substantial error," Lilienthal declared. "I think I should be criticized and indeed it appears I am." Members of the committee who had been directing some of the heaviest recent blasts at Lilienthal joined in the laughter of the spectators.

Ferguson commented that the FBI was not called into the case until the trail had grown cold. Lilienthal denied that the commission in any way was unwilling to cooperate with the FBI.

He said there was no indication the statute requiring prompt notification of the FBI in the event of a violation of security had been broken, since the commission in-

Doctor Says Forrestal Told Of Florida Suicide Attempt

President to Lead Nation in Mourning At Funeral Today

James Forrestal who committed suicide will be buried in Arlington Cemetery today with the Nation's great in Government as mourners, headed by President Truman. Services will begin at 11 a. m.

As the Nation grieved the death of its first Secretary of Defense, Mrs. Forrestal exonerated Bethesda Naval Hospital and the Navy psychiatrist who attended her husband of any blame for Forrestal's leap from a sixteenth-story hospital window.

In a letter to John L. Sullivan, retiring Secretary of Navy, she said there was "no foundation for criticism" of either the hospital or Capt. George N. Raines, the top Navy psychiatrist who took full responsibility for permitting Forrestal the freedom which enabled him to make his fatal plunge.

"Jim would be hurt indeed if he felt there was any criticism of the Naval Medical Center for its care of him," Mrs. Forrestal said. "It would have been impossible for him to have recovered with the knowledge that he was under constant watch, and I am sure that the risk in gradually dispensing with the watch was essential."

Raines appeared yesterday before a Navy board of inquiry, where he presumably elaborated on his public statement that relaxation of the hospital watch over

Menninger Explains Examination Showed No Marks on Patient

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

James Forrestal told the noted psychiatrist, Dr. William C. Menninger that on the night of March 31, at Hobe Sound, Fla., he put a belt around his neck with the intention of hanging himself, but the belt broke.

This story of attempted suicide more than seven weeks before the former Defense Secretary leaped to his death, probably was either a "nightmare" or a "fantasy" of Forrestal's imagination, Dr. Menninger said last night.

As proof, he cited the fact that there were no marks of any kind on Forrestal's throat or body when he was examined after his story, nor was any broken belt found.

There may have been, that night in Florida, a "gesture" of a suicide attempt by Forrestal, Dr. Menninger said. There was no "serious" attempt, he declared he was sure.

At no time was Forrestal "wild," the psychiatrist said. Rumors that he was, he insisted, are "nonsense."

Dr. Menninger spoke from Montreal in an exclusive telephone interview with The Washington Post. He is attending the Canadian Convention of the American Psychiatric Association, of which he is the retiring president.

Dr. Menninger's account was the Record $17-Million Budget Requested for Montgomery

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Increased operating costs and the first leg of an ambitious five-year capital improvement program have sent Montgomery County's 1949-50 budget up to a record $17 million.

This was the estimate submitted yesterday to the County Council by County Manager Irving G. McNayr, who proposed a ten-cent increase in the county tax rate to help meet the total.

This will raise the rate to $1.98 per $100 valuation. For suburbanites, who now pay an additional 31 cents suburban tax (in the Bethesda and Silver Spring areas), McNayr suggested a reduction to 20 cents, or a net 1-cent reduction in actual taxes paid.

Here is how the budget goes up:

Operating expenses—from $6,535,246 during the current year to a proposed $7,834,628, or a $1,299,382 jump.

Total budget—from $11,456,148 during the current year to a proposed $17,103,869.71, a jump of nearly $6,500,000.

The capital expenditures which McNayr proposes for 1949-50 would go mostly to finance new school construction. Of a total of $6,654,000 so earmarked, $5,040,000 would go for this purpose.

To finance this construction, McNayr proposes that Montgomery County finance $1,260,000 of the work by a direct State grant, and borrow the remaining $3,780,000 in low-interest bonds.

Of school money which immediately will come out of county funds the budget total is about $2,500,000 higher than the current year.

The schools will get $3,352,918 for operating expenses, pared down from their request of $3,746,707. Part of this money will go to pay 85 new teachers, needed to handle an estimated 3000 increase in enrollment. McNayr allowed $3000 per teacher for the

West Rejects Plan to End Bonn State

By Wes Gallagher

Paris, May 24 (AP).—Russia tonight proposed in the Foreign Ministers Council to wipe out the West German State and return German affairs to four-power control. All three Western powers immediately rejected the proposals, made by Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky.

The breakdown of four-power machinery led to the Berlin blockade.

United States Secretary of State Acheson called the Russian suggestions "disappointing."

"My hopes are distinctly chilled," he said.

Meeting Lasts Three Hours

The first Soviet proposal in this fourth effort of the Foreign Ministers to reach a German settlement were outlined by Western power press officers after a meeting of nearly three hours. It was the second session of the conference.

In effect Vishinsky's plan would:

1. Nullify the West German state at Bonn by putting control of Germany in the hands of a council under the Allied Control Council. This German central governing body would be formed from the Communist economic officials of East Germany and the Economic Council of West Germany.

2. Give implied Western recognition to the hand-picked East-Communist regime by giving it an equal voice in control of German affairs.

3. Strip from western Germans the self-governing powers they have in the occupation statute by going back to the now-defunct Allied Control Council. Russia wrecked this body by walking out in March, 1948.

4. Call for a new election in strife-torn Berlin of a government for all the city.

5. Wipe out the Ruhr authority the three Western powers, with Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, have set up. Russia would substitute control by the Big Four plus countries bordering Germany—Poland, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg—and representatives of German economic organizations.

No change in Russia's demands for 10 billion dollars in reparations from Germany was indicated. Vishinsky said Russia's position on that was well known.

The Soviet Foreign Minister led up to his plan in a long speech accusing the Western powers of departing from the principles laid down at Yalta and Potsdam and of partitioning Germany. However, he did not indulge in the acrimonious statements on these points that have characterized past conferences.

His proposition, in a short written statement, contained two main points.

"Back-to-Potsdam Policy"

The first would reestablish "the activity of the Allied Control Council in Germany on its previous basis" as the supreme power, and reestablish the Inter-Allied Kommandatura in Berlin "for the coordination of all city measures."

The second point would set up a "single German central body," using as a basis "German economic organs existing at present in the East Zone and West Zone," and reestablish the "all-Berlin magistrate" or Government. The question of a date for Berlin elections would be settled by the Berlin Kommandatura.

Acheson rose as soon as Vishinsky finished and called the program a "back-to-Potsdam policy." He compared it with a patient who had use of three limbs restored after being stricken with paralysis and who was asked to return to his helpless condition.

Chinese Reds Seize Shanghai Unopposed

Shanghai (Wednesday), May 25 (AP).—Shanghai, the world's fourth largest city, fell unopposed to the Chinese Communists today.

The green-clad Communist troops marched into the city to the pealing of church bells, which apparently were welcoming them.

The battle still raged to the north. The bulk of the garrison had withdrawn during the night and was trying to escape to Woosung, 10 miles north.

The veteran troops of Red Gen. Chen Yi moved into the city some time before dawn. They came through the old French concession, which is in the southwest part of the city.

After a night of terrific cannonading from the north and pitched battles on the west, the Reds entered briskly and without much trouble.

The Red troops, although plainly tired, came down all main avenues of the city to the Bund, Shanghai's famous waterfront, on the double quick. They carried light arms and machine guns.

Their sharp formations, decisive movements and obvious spirit contrasted sharply with the indifferent Nationalist soldiers, who spent a good part of their last days in Shanghai looting.

At a barricade in front of the City Hall, Nationalists brought out a huge sign saying "Welcome Peoples Liberation (Communist) Army."

Few Shanghai residents saw the Communist entry. A rigid curfew kept everyone off the street until 6 a. m. The advance units moved down almost vacant streets.

The Red troops began putting

BULLETIN

Three-year-old Margaret LaVerne James was found asleep on the banks of the Potomac River about a mile from her Indian Head (Md) home by searchers shortly after 2 a. m. today. The child was barefooted and lying in a patch of honeysuckle

Some 300 men including Marines and State policemen were scouring the area around an Indianhead (Md.) housing project last night, searching for a 3-year-old girl who disappeared there about 6:15 last night.

The child is Margaret LaVerne James, the daughter of Andrews Air Force Base Sergt. and Mrs. Homer James.

According to Leo Schwartz, resident manager of the Potomac Heights Housing project, where the child lived, she was last seen by her 6-year-old sister Wanda in a field about 100 yards from their home at 123 Circle ave. The site is about 15 miles south of the District.

The children were picking flowers, Schwartz said, and were called home by a neighbor when rain threatened. The older girl returned alone thinking her sister was following behind her.

Their mother was out of the house, Schwartz said, and when the neighbor set out to look for Margaret, the child had disappeared.

Schwartz said almost every man in the housing project volunteered and a search was soon organized. They were joined by a detachment of Marines from the Naval Powder Factory nearby and several State policemen.

Margaret LaVerne is described as chubby, with straight blond hair, light complexion, blue eyes, and answering to the name of "Verne." She was without shoes, wearing a blue and white dress with a pink ribbon.

227-163 Vote Is Surprise To Sponsors Of Measure

Legislation Would Have Boosted Salary Of All in Uniform But Lowest Grade

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The House yesterday defeated a military pay bill which would have increased the wages of every one in uniform but recruits.

By a vote of 227 to 163, the 406-million-dollar-a-year measure was ordered recommitted to the House Armed Services Committee "for further study."

Economy advocates and a bloc of young World War II veterans who objected to the distribution of pay raises in the bill were responsible for the surprise Administration defeat. Opponents charged that the bill favored high ranking officers over enlisted men.

Reversal for Truman

The upset left sponsors of the bill and top officers in the galleries wondering what had happened. Earlier in the day, leaders had appeared to have the situation well in hand and had beaten off most of the efforts to change the measure.

It was also something of a reversal for President Truman. Earlier in the day, a letter from him to Speaker Rayburn was read to the House. In it, Mr. Truman urged approval of the bill as a "most important part" of the defense program. The armed forces, he said, are having trouble getting high-type men at present pay scales.

Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee, said he'd call the group together next week to decide whether or not to attempt to write another pay bill this year.

Vote Must Be Analyzed

"We'll first have to analyze the vote," Vinson told The Washington Post. "If it was based on economy, there's probably not much chance of reviving the bill. But if it was the distribution of pay rates, we can readjust them."

But Representative Kilday (D., Tex.), author and floor manager of the measure, told reporters "the bill is dead for this year and probably several years to come." He said his subcommittee had worked continuously on it for months and he didn't see much point in "further study."

Kilday attributed the defeat to a combination of forces.

"First there was the economy crowd," he said. "Then there were the young veterans who wanted to get some things off their chests. And finally the liberals who always have opposed anything for the military."

"Demagoguery" Charged

Several backers of the bill declared the defeat was due to "demagoguery"—and a misconception that the bill discriminated against enlisted men and in favor of generals and admirals.

Sponsors pointed out that the bill would give substantial pay increases to noncommissioned officers as well as officers. They said it aimed at basing compensation on responsibility and noted that enlisted men had received substantial increases in recent years in efforts to stimulate recruiting and avoid use of the draft.

One member declared the moral of the vote was:

"Be kind to an enlisted man, because some day he may be elected to Congress."

Leader of the former GIs who wanted to rewrite the bill was young Pat Sutton, Tennessee Democrat. Sutton ended the war as a much-decorated, twice wounded Navy junior lieutenant, but spent some months earlier as an enlisted chauffeur to a naval captain.

He hammered constantly at the "prerequisites" enjoyed by top

Suit Charges Doctor Sired Child, Sent Bill

Butler, Pa., May 24 (AP).—Clair W. Hutzler filed suit against his family physician today claiming the doctor stole his wife's affections, sired her third child and sent him a $122.50 bill for professional services in the delivery of the baby.

Hutzler sued Dr. Paul A. Hinchberger, Butler physician. He asked $50,000.

His wife left him and the two children by their marriage last March 6, Hutzler said. He asked damages for the loss of his wife, injury to his social position and family reputation, "together with mental agony, laceration of feelings and wounded sensibilities."

Former A-Scientist Identified as Red

CLARENCE HISKEY
Probe witness

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Reporter

A former Communist yesterday named Clarence F. Hiskey, wartime atomic scientist, as a party member. Hiskey invoked constitutional rights and refused to say whether this was true.

His accuser was Paul Crouch, who acknowledges 17 years in the Communist Party before turning against it.

Crouch and Hiskey faced each other from 3 feet in the first public hearings this year by the House Un-American Activities Committee. Crouch now is a mechanical-department employe of the Miami Daily News, Hiskey an associate professor of chemistry at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute.

Considers Himself Loyal

On grounds the answers might tend to incriminate him, Hiskey time and again declined to say whether he is or ever has been a Communist, attended party meetings or had ever seen Crouch before.

On the same grounds, he refused to confirm or deny charges made in a committee report last year that he gave information to Arthur Adams, who was described as a wartime Soviet spy.

But he said that "certainly" he considers himself loyal to the United States Government.

The committee yesterday swore in a woman employe of the United Nations as a witness but her questioning was delayed.

Testimony of Mrs. Phillip O. Keeney, editor in the U. N. Bureau of Documents, was put off indefinitely to let the committee look into the health of her husband, who was subpenaed to appear with her but didn't show up.

Husband Unemployed

Reporters were told that the committee wants to question the Keeneys at the same time but a doctor's certificate was submitted saying Keeney is under treatment for symptoms of ulcers. The committee is investigating this.

Keeney is unemployed. He formerly worked for the Library of Congress and the War Department. Mrs. Keeney formerly was employed by the wartime Board of Economic Warfare and the Allied Repatriation Commission.

Red faced, with his sandy hair cut in crew style, Hiskey stared unblinkingly through his glasses while Crouch was put through a question and answer session.

Louis J. Russell, the committee's senior investigator, asked if Crouch ever had met Hiskey.

"I have," Crouch answered in a firm voice.

"Where did you meet him?

Once Worked For TVA

"I met him at Knoxville in 1939 and 1940 at various Communist Party meetings at homes of Communist friends."

Crouch said he knew Hiskey as Professor Hiskey, had attended Communist Party meetings with him "many times" and was present with him at Communist Central Committee meetings in New York City.

"Mr. Hiskey," he said, "was known to me as an active member of the Communist Party."

Hiskey had said he formerly was an instructor at the University of Tennessee, at Knoxville, and for a time in 1941 was employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority, at Sheffield, Ala. He said he went from Sheffield to Columbia University in New York.

The 36-year-old professor did wartime chemical research for the SAM Laboratory, part of the atomic-bomb project, at Columbia, then at the metallurgical laboratory at the University of Chicago.

Hiskey said he was born under the name Clarence Francis Szechochowski, in Milwaukee, and still holds a reserve commission in the Army.

He refused on grounds the answers might incriminate him to say whether he ever paid Communist Party dues to John Stone Martin while in Knoxville, promoted Red infiltration of TVA or knew a Kenneth May. May is not identified in the hearing.

Another Question Unanswered

Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) tried twice to get him to answer this one: "Did you, while attached to the atomic-energy installations, turn over information to any authorized person?"

Twice the professor stood on his constitutional rights to refuse to reply.

The committee report last year recommended immediate prosecution of Hiskey and others. It said Hiskey was engaged in "a clear case of conspiracy" to "divulge secret and classified information relating to the atom-bomb project to a Soviet espionage agent."

Frank Tavenner, committee counsel, told reporters yesterday's hearing added little except that Crouch named Hiskey as a Communist. He said that is of "some importance."

Purpose Not To Overthrow U. S., Red Says

New York, May 24 (AP).—The first Communist leader to testify in his own defense denied today that he advocated the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Gates

John W. Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, said "I did not," when asked if he had urged such a thing verbally or in writing.

Gates, 35-year-old veteran who has been a Communist party member 16 years, spent the day on the stand under examination by his attorney, Harry Sacher, telling of his work in the party.

His testimony offered direct rebuttal to the contention of the Government that Communists were taught revolution in the United States would come in a depression.

Gates said American Communists did not advance this idea. Instead, he asserted, they taught that "the only way" crises could be abolished forever was by abolishment of the capitalist system and the establishment of socialism.

School to Fire Hans Freistadt

Chapel Hill, N. C., May 24 (AP).—Communist Hans Freistadt won't be teaching at the greater University of North Carolina after June 1.

Chancellor Robert House told the university trustees today that Freistadt had been ordered dismissed as a part-time physics instructor at the end of this scholastic year.

The youthful Austrian native's receipt of an Atomic Energy Commission fellowship set off a recent congressional injuiry. His frank admission that he is a Communist led to today's action by the university.

Advised of Freistadt's dismissal, the trustees voted unanimously to leave the handling of all Communist problems at the greater university to the administration.

"We frankly don't want Communists on this campus any more than you do," Controller W. D. Carmichael, jr., told them.

"If we can't keep Communists out, you'd better get rid of us and get someone who can keep them out."

The three chancellors of the university said in a report that "the Communists are taking advantage of the unlimited freedom of our university. And if we are not realistic, prudent and cautious, we may discover too late that we have stretched our freedom and tolerance to the point that we have been unwitting 'collaborationists' of the Communists."

Another Uranium 'Theft' Story Told . . .

AN "INSIDE JOB"—Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (left) (D., Wyo.) and David Lilienthal (right), chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, talk with Carroll L. Wilson, AEC general manager. quiry indicated the U-235 had been "misplaced."

"The FBI report," Lilienthal pointed out, "does not state there was a violation of the law."

Meanwhile the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy is continuing its investigation of how the ounce of U-235 which is the fissionable or potentially explosive material from which bombs can be produced, disappeared. It was originally contained in a brown laboratory bottle of powdered uranium oxide which also contained U-238. The exact proportions of the mixture make it subject to chemical trace and the AEC has reported that six-sevenths of the missing ounce of U-235 have turned up in other containers but the mystery of what became of the original bottle still persists.

AEC officials told the Appropriations group, which is checking security regulations before voting atomic funds for next year, that the commission has been checking its own security regulations for some time.

General Manage. Carroll L. Wilson said the commission's own security officers set a deliberate trap and "stole" two bars of uranium metal from the Hanford (Wash.) atomic plant. The bars were kept in the security officer's own safe, Wilson said, and were returned to the plant a couple of days ago.

Decision Opposed by Strauss

The committee also delved into the shipment of radioactive isotopes to foreign countries. All these super-charged non-splittable elements shipped abroad, commission witnesses said, were designed for "benign uses" in medicine and so forth.

But Atomic Energy Commissioner Lewis Strauss a scientist himself, said he protested against the shipment and lost on a four-to-one vote—on the ground that the United States should not take "a calculated risk, even if it was slight" of aiding weapon production abroad.

In medicine radio-active isotopes are used as "tracers" and presumably could be used as "tracers" also in weapon production.

AEC Research Director Kenneth S. Pitzer pointed out, however, that such isotopes had been produced before the war and before the development of the atomic bomb.

Strauss agreed with other commissioners that the radioisotopes could not be used to make atomic bombs.

Lilienthal appealed to the committee not to allow the export of radioisotopes to become a matter of "public fear." They are of less value in a military sense, he said, than many other things which this country exports, including steel and electrical apparatus.

Originally the Appropriations group planned to call Rear Admiral John S. Gingrich, who resigned as security chief of the commission May 3. After a 75-minute conference of members of the Appropriations Subcommittee with the Joint Atomic Energy Committee it was decided that the Atomic Energy group will hear Gingrich today. The jurisdictional question was ironed out by an invitation to members of the Appropriations Subcommittee to sit in on the hearing.

Warren Letter Read

The appropriations group originally started its hearings to study the AEC's use of Government funds to award scholarships in the field of nonsecret work to persons who were not checked by the FBI.

Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) read a letter from Comptroller General Lindsay Warren holding that present laws forbidding payment of Government salaries to members of subversive organizations do not cover fellowship students. Warren said Congress should reword the law if it wishes to block fellowships to alleged Communists. He added that the same goal could be achieved by administrative measures.

The AEC has already issued an order requiring a loyalty oath from all fellowship students, and committee discussion has made it clear that some such provision will be written into law.

Edelman Disillusioned

One fellowship student, Dr. Isadore S. Edelman, who holds a $3750 medical research fellowship at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston, told the committee yesterday he saw no reason why students should object to an FBI investigation.

Edelman acknowledged he attended a couple of Communist Party meetings in 1943, and might have signed an application to join, but he said he was quickly disillusioned and is not now sympathetic with communism.

O'Mahoney, earlier had pointed out that if FBI investigations of fellowship students are to be undertaken the FBI will need a larger appropriation. The House he said, had stricken a Budget Bureau request for $1,202,400 from the appropriation measure. Turning to Ferguson, a leading Government economy advocate, he asked if Ferguson would join in the effort to restore the cut. There was general committee laughter as the Michigan Senator agreed.

Coplon Trial Judge Again Chides Lawyer

By the United Press

Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves gave Judith Coplon's spy trial lawyer, Archibald Palmer, another sharp rebuke yesterday while the jury was out of the courtroom.

The jurist, who last week fined Palmer $100 for contempt of court, leaned over the bench and sternly informed the defense attorney:

"You are doing a bad job for your client."

"Your Conduct Is Bad"

"No, you're not," said Reeves. "I've had a lot of opportunities to judge lawyers and your conduct is bad."

Miss Coplon, a former Justice Department employe, is accused of stealing secret Government files for transmission to Russia. She was arrested by the FBI in New York March 4 with Valentin Gubitchev, suspended Soviet employe of the United Nations.

Several times during the morning session, the 75-year-old Kansas City judge objected to Palmer's tactics in cross-examining FBI Agent Daniel F. Garde, who helped shadow Miss Coplon and Gubitchev before the arrest.

"Ask Proper Questions"

Reeves told the lawyer to stop "playing with words" and ask "proper questions."

Over Kelley's objections, Reeves permitted Palmer to ask Garde if he knew whether Gubitchev was a United States counterspy working within the Soviet delegation to the United Nations.

The agent said he knew nothing about Gubitchev being a counterspy.

British Court Compromises In Postponing Eisler Hearing

London, May 24 (AP).—Magistrate John F. Eastwood today postponed the extradition hearing for Communist Gerhart Eisler until Friday.

This was the judge's compromise on requests from the United States for an eight-day delay and from the defense for an immediate trial. He again denied Eisler bail.

Defense Attorney Dudley Collard accused the United States of a policy of "shoot first and ask questions afterward" in its pursuit of Eisler, a German-born Communist leader under two prison sentences, who jumped bail in New York and stowed away on a ship bound for Poland.

Four British policemen lugged him from the Polish ship Batory off Southampton May 14.

The United States seeks his return as a fugitive from justice. Its legal representative in the case is F. Graham Maw, British barrister. Maw asked for more time to prepare the case.

Home Secretary James Chuter Ede, who announced last week he would decide whether Eisler should be considered a political refugee entitled to haven or a fugitive from justice, sent the extradition request to the Bow Street Magistrates Court today with an order to "proceed." A Home Office source declined to say whether this meant the secretary has made his decision.

Outside the small courtroom, seven Communists paraded with red-lettered signs: "Set Eisler Free." Police ordered them from the sidewalk to the street.

Maw said official United States documents asking the return of Eisler were received yesterday. They were sent immediately to British authorities, he added, and the United States Embassy was arranging to get copies today.

"It is intolerable that Eisler should be kept in a British prison while the United States make their leisurely preparation of this case," Collard countered. "They have had 14 days' notice of the matter."

The United States seeks return of Eisler on the ground he fled the country while free on bail on a conviction of falsifying information on an application for an exit visa.

Eisler was returned to Brixton Prison.

Habeas Writ Signed For Wife of Eisler

New York, May 24 (U.P.).—U. S. District Judge Murray Hulbert today signed a habeas corpus writ sought by the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born in an attempt to free Mrs. Gerhart Eisler from Ellis Island.

Mrs. Eisler, whose husband recently fled this country, has been held without bail since May 13 for deportation. The court set Friday for hearing of arguments on whether she should be released on bail.

SPEAKING OF Furniture
By LESTER L. WRIGHT

FASHION TAKES THE FLOOR

Close your eyes for just a minute and try to imagine the above illustration without the rug. Hardly the same room at all, is it?

This is just another example of how floor coverings can set the fashion theme in your home. Well-styled furniture and accessories hit high "see" when they go hand in hand with a beautiful carpet or rug.

As in every other phase of interior decorating, there are certain rules that must be followed. Size, for example. Be sure your rugs are large enough. It is a good idea to keep your rugs no more than eight inches from the wall.

The color and design of a rug are important too. If, for example, you want the room to appear larger, choose a plain pattern. With plain carpeting you have a wider variety of bold-colored patterns to choose from as far as the rest of the room is concerned. If the carpet has a design, as the one pictured above, you'll find solid-colored draperies and upholstery more in harmony.

You will enjoy discussing your furniture and other decorating problems with our friendly staff. Come in to . . .

Red Strike Police Quit West Berlin

Berlin, May 24 (U.P.).—Communist strikebreakers and Russian-controlled police evacuated all West Berlin tonight, bowing to an ultimatum by American Commandant Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley, who gave them two hours to get out.

Howley delivered the ultimatum for the three Western powers on the fourth day of a railroad strike in which at least two persons have been killed and 1200 hurt or wounded.

He also demanded the withdrawal of any Red army troop units in the United States sector.

Even before 7 p. m., the deadline set by Howley, the East Berlin Communists began to leave peaceably.

The only snag developed at Priesterwag, in the U. S. sector, where 37 Russian soldiers refused to leave by truck. The rails had been ripped up, and the train they had called could not move them. They promised to leave when the track was repaired.

The last of an estimated 2000 Soviet sector police and Communist strikebreakers, rammed in by train by the Russians Saturday and early Sunday, had gone from the "el" stations 4½ hours after the Western ultimatum was issued.

Howley's letter to Gen. Vladimir I. Petrov, Soviet transport chief, and Erwin Kreikemeyer, Communist president of the railways, charged them with "a type of strikebreaking which has resulted in unnecessary bloodshed and is conducive to even greater violence."

The estimated 16,000 German railway workers who live in West Berlin but work for the Soviet-controlled German railway administration, struck at midnight Friday after weeks of negotiations for pay in Westmarks instead of the less valuable Soviet marks.

Violence erupted almost at once, as strikers fought strikebreakers and Soviet sector police in West Berlin's elevated stations, yards and streets for control of the sprawling network. Red army officers were stoned.

"The U. S. Military Government has possibly shown too great patience in this matter in our endeavor to permit the Reichsbahndirektion to negotiate in a legitimate manner its differences with the striking workmen," Howley's letter said.

Howley told reporters, "I won't stand by while Soviet railway police shoot into crowds in the American sector and forcibly take prisoners to the East sector who will be tried there and perhaps sentenced to death."

He emphasized that "we are not taking sides. We are not going to run the trains for the railroad." From now on, he said, the strike will be handled "on a democratic basis," with picketing and "any other legitimate strike method."

It was not known what effect the withdrawal would have on the paralyzed elevated rail traffic, or on train traffic with western Germany, which has been cut more than 50 per cent. Authorities have said that in some sections track has been torn up and equipment damaged.

Chinese Reds Seize Shanghai

up posters in Chinese instructing the populace to be calm and assuring them they had nothing to fear.

Other units began stringing telephone wires. Others marked important street intersections with white arrows, fixing the routes into the city.

The white flag flew over Foochow police station, downtown and next door to the American Club. Not far away is the American Consulate.

A new police group took over the station during the night as the old police evacuated. (Whether these are Red police is not known.)

Amos Landman, Associated Press correspondent, said that as the first Communist troops reached the plush Park Hotel, one of Shanghai's skyscrapers, Nationalist soldiers stood at barricades about two blocks away. There was no firing however.

Carried American Carbines

Landman reported the Communist troops appeared to be dumfounded to have an American drive up in his car. They politely asked him to turn around and drive back to avoid danger.

"Those I saw carried American carbines," he reported. "Their uniforms were soiled, indicating they had been through thick fighting."

Machine-gun fire which had crackled through the night in the southwest broke off at dawn. The entry was peaceful, said a resident of the French concession.

Some small-arms fire still could be heard elsewhere in the city.

Czechs Given Warning by Archbishop

ARCHBISHOP JOSEF BERAN
Threatens excommunication

Prague, May 24 (AP).—The head of Czechoslovakia's nine million Catholics today threatened the excommunication of all Catholics who help the Communist government against the church.

A Catholic who is excommunicated is denied sacraments of the church and association with faithful members.

Archbishop Josef Beran, once forced to sweep streets by Nazis and imprisoned at Dachau, struck his sharpest blow yet in the simmering conflict that has followed the Communist revolution of 1948.

He demanded forcefully that the state cease publication of what it calls the "Official Catholic Gazette" and accused a cabinet minister of a "sin" by misleading faithful church members. He charged an effort is being made to establish a Catholic Church separated from Rome.

The accusations, contained in two letters, followed an earlier charge that recording devices had been hidden in a room where Catholic bishops were discussing a program of reconciliation with the government last March.

The information in the letters did not come from the archbishopric. Archbishop Beran has steadfastly avoided any contact with the Western press. It was supplied in such a way, however, that there was no doubt of the letters' authenticity.

One letter was to Alois Petr, minister of transport and head of the People's Party. The archbishop asked Petr and other Catholics of the party if they knew they were "accomplices in all anti-church measures?"

In a letter to the Minister of Schools, Zdenek Nejedly, Archbishop Beran protested against the title "Gazette of the Catholic Clergy" on a new official publication. The Gazette was announced last week as a government periodical devoted to informing the clergy of decrees "so that they will not be misled by uninformed persons in the Catholic hierarchy."

Bill Approved for U. N. to Use U. S. Troops

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday unanimously approved a bill to help provide the United Nations with a small United States police force to use in peaceful settlement of disputes.

The bill also would raise the salary of United Nations Delegate Warren R. Austin from $20,000 to $25,000 a year, provide him with an additional deputy and authorize members of Congress to represent this country on top-level U. N. bodies.

Sponsors indicated the legislation is intended to answer charges that this country is "losing faith and interest" in the world organization. A similar measure is pending in the House.

The Senate bill authorizes President Truman to detail up to 1000 officers and men from the armed services to act as observers, guards, advisers or in other non-combat positions with U. N. commissions attempting amicable settlement of disputes.

Such commissions now are operating in the Balkans, Palestine, Kashmir and Indonesia. While United States troops previously have served with such commissions, by presidential order, it was felt the practice should be placed on a clear statutory basis.

So far, United States military personnel detailed to the United Nations has never exceeded 600 men at a time.

The bill also authorizes the armed forces to furnish a "fair share" of the equipment, supplies and communications facilities needed by U. N. peace missions.

The committee wrote into the bill a number of limiting clauses to make it clear United States personnel will be used only for noncombatant functions and not for application of international sanctions.

Efforts to create a larger United Nations force to deal with sanctions, or punishment of aggressor nations, have been stymied in the Security Council by Russia.

ECA Orders U. S. Ships Used for Half of Cargo

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday announced regulations specifying that at least half of all Marshall Plan-financed recovery cargoes be carried on United States ships.

The recovery agency stated the action results from a congressional amendment to the European Recovery Act guaranteeing the American Merchant Marine at least a 50-50 split.

Poles Silent On Missing U. S. Youth

John Taylor, 18-year-old Pittsburgh orphan, has disappeared behind the Iron Curtain and the Polish government refuses to reveal what happened to him, the State Department said yesterday.

The U. S. Embassy in Warsaw is "pursuing the matter vigorously," the department said.

The Polish government last week notified the embassy that Taylor had been picked up by the Polish militia for "vagrancy" and "lack of documentation."

Lincoln White, a department spokesman, said two embassy officials who interviewed Taylor at militia headquarters in Warsaw reported he was picked up while searching for an uncle in the town of Cracow.

They said he told them he was born in Pittsburgh and had lived there with his grandfather, named Koszninski, until 1948, when he stowed away on an American ship to join his brother, S/Sergt. Johnson Taylor, in Munich. He left Munich a month ago and slipped through the Iron Curtain in his quest for the uncle.

The militia notified the embassy on Saturday that it was checking to see whether any criminal charges were pending against the youth and said that if not he would be released to the embassy.

Embassy officials heard no further word and checked with headquarters Monday.

"They were told that the case was closed, that the boy was not there, and that embassy officials would not be permitted inside the headquarters orgive n any further information," White said. "The embassy is pursuing the matter vigorously."

Memorial Period Bills Approved by Committee

Bills designating October 11, 1949, as General Pulaski day and the week of June 5 as Patrick Henry week were approved yesterday by the House Judiciary Committee.

The committee shelved a bill to make Good Friday a legal holiday.

first given of what Capt. George N. Raines, Navy psychiatrist, says was the only even "alleged" suicide attempt made by Forrestal before his leap Sunday from the 16th floor of Bethesda Naval Hospital. The Navy has denied stories of "repeated" suicide attempts, including wrist-slashings.

Dr. Menninger is one the Nation's best known psychiatrists. Director of the Menninger Foundation School of Graduate Psychiatric Training at Topeka, Kans., he was neuropsychiatric consultant to the Surgeon General of the Army during World War II.

"I had known Mr. Forrestal," he said. "I had consulted with him on service psychiatry policies. He had some confidence in me."

At Forrestal's request Dr. Menninger had arrived at Hobe Sound, Fla., on the afternoon of April 1.

That same evening the psychiatrist saw as a patient the man who frequently had consulted him on service psychiatry policy.

Forrestal's Account

Forrestal told him, Dr. Menninger said, that he had slept badly the night before. Then:

"Mr. Forrestal told me," Dr. Menninger said, "that the night before I arrived he had put a belt around his neck with the intention of hanging himself, but the belt broke. Since there were no marks on his throat or body I consider this a nightmare. Also, we never found a broken belt of any kind."

In explaining this story, Dr. Menninger stated:

"There isn't a seriously depressed person ever who doesn't have thoughts of suicide—it's like fever in pneumonia. Also, it is a common symptom in persons who are very worried, very concerned, not to see things as they really are—the whole world looks black to them. They exaggerate in their descriptions of things to other persons."

This, he said he believed, was the case with Forrestal, and the explanation of his story that he tried to hang himself in Florida, where he had gone to stay with friends after nine strenuous years of Government service.

Forrestal, that is, did one of three things: He dreamed the story during his sleep; or he made it up entirely, a fantasy of his distorted imagination; or he did make "a gesture of an attempt" at suicide.

But if he did the last, Dr. Menninger said he could only conclude, it would have been only the weakest of attempts—there being no marks on the body afterward.

Could Have Ended Life

"If he had really wanted to commit suicide," Dr. Menninger said, "he could very easily have done it that night before I got there."

Dr. Menninger said he had seen newspaper columnist stories that the former Secretary of Defense was "restrained" from suicide by people who had to "hold" him.

"These stories are not true," Dr. Menninger said. "Mr. Forrestal was never at any time 'wild'."

Captain Raines has stated that he also examined Forrestal on the afternoon of April 2, the second day after the reported attempt at suicide in Florida.

"There were no marks or scars or even evidence of bruises on his body," Capt Raines said.

Capt. Raines, chief Navy psychiatrist, arrived at Hobe Sound by plane March 31 — the night the alleged suicide attempt took place. He refrained from seeing Forrestal immediately on ethical grounds—since he was told that Dr. Menninger, another psychiatrist, was arriving the following afternoon at the patient's request.

After Forrestal had seen Dr. Menninger—and it is now revealed Forrestal had told his story of trying to hang himself—Dr. Menninger, Dr. Raines and Ferdinand Eberstadt, acting for the Forrestal family, conferred. It was decided that Forrestal should be treated at the Bethesda Hospital.

Forrestal, with Dr. Raines as his physician, returned to Washington by air on April 2, and was admitted to the hospital.

In the interview last night Dr. Menninger denied categorically and in sharpest terms the rumor that he had been discontented with the handling of the Forrestal case and had withdrawn from it himself.

"That is absolutely untrue," he said. "I supported George Raines 100 per cent in his methods in the case, and I support him now. I am completely satisfied with the way he handled it."

Pearson Sues Pegler; Charges $250,000 Libel

By The Associated Press

Drew Pearson, newspaper columnist and radio commentator, said last night his attorneys have filed a $250,000 libel suit against Westbrook Pegler, columnist.

Pearson said the New York law firm of Greenbaum, Wolf & Ernst filed the suit in the New York Supreme Court yesterday, naming Pegler and his syndicate, King Features.

Pearson told a reporter that two of Pegler's columns, released this week, and dealing with some of Pearson's comments on the late James Forrestal, were the basis of the suit.

Visits New York

Headhunter's Son in U. S. as Missionary

ROBERT SALAU
Island preacher arrives

New York, May 24 (U.P.).—A barefoot South Sea Island Fuzzy Wuzzy in a blue wool skirt, a GI bob and wearing a big smile arrived in New York today for his first look at the "big fella place."

Robert Salau, 42, son of a reformed Solomon Islands headhunter, was amazed that the Empire State Building looked just like the tattered picture he had carried halfway around the world. It is "high up too much," he declared.

Salau, a Seventh Day Adventist missionary, arrived on the liner Mauretania after a visit to England, France and Switzerland.

The missionary is one of the civilized Fuzzie Wuzzies. About 40 years ago the tribe was persuaded by missionaries to stop chopping off the heads of enemies and also saving the skulls of deceased members of families.

During the war, Salau and thousands of other converts gave vital information to American Marines. He received a citation.

Hewa s brought here by the Adventist Church to preach throughout the country for 12 weeks, to spur contributions for missionary work.

ranking officers in addition to their pay, and charged that "some officers use money from the contingent fund to send flowers to their girl friends."

The vote to send the bill back to committee was supported by 121 Democrats, 105 Republicans and Representative Vito Marcantonio, the House's sole American Laborite. Against it were 120 Democrats and 43 Republicans.

Rider Would Stop Allotments

Earlier, Administration forces beat off all but one attempt to rewrite the measure on the floor. Success of that amendment helped defeat the bill.

The bill would have ended all family allowances for enlisted men six months after passage, except for those still serving on enlistments entered into before July 1, 1946. An amendment by Representative Carroll (D., Colo.) to continue such allowances for the duration of the their present enlistments for all men signing up prior to passage of the bill was adopted 90 to 69.

This would have increased the cost of the measure by from 50 to 100 million dollars a year, for the next two or three years. Many members had the idea it would cost much more. Its adoption swung over some economy advocates who were prepared to go along with the 400 million dollar a year cost.

New Service Unification Act Urged as Forrestal Monument

The Senate was told yesterday that the present Armed Services "Unification" Act killed James Forrestal and that a better law should be passed as a "great monument" to him.

Senator Malone (R., Nev.) said the law was so weak as to saddle Forrestal with an "impossible" job. And Senator Morse (R., Ore.) proposed that the Secretary of Defense be given greatly increased powers as a memorial to Forrestal.

Forrestal, former Defense Secretary, took his own life Sunday in a leap from the sixteenth floor of Bethesda (Md.) Naval Hospital.

Malone teamed up with Senator Morse in urging amendments that would place greater authority in the secretary than is called for in a pending bill to revise the Unification Act.

He said the orignial law permitted the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force to ignore the Secretary of Defense and "go directly to the President, and they did. We gave Jim Forrestal an impossible job."

He said Forrestal was anxious to bring the services together, but their rivalry and wrangling "worried Jim Forrestal to death."

Malone said Louis A. Johnson, Forrestal's successor, is a big "rugged fellow with plenty of guts," but that Congress might "kill him too unless it gives him clear authority."

Morse offered a series of amendments that among other things would remove an existing ban against transferring Marines to the Army or naval aviators to the Air Forces.

It is of unmost importance, he said, that a war should be conducted through a civilian head. The question is, he added, "whether we are going to give the Secretary of Defense the power of decision or whether we want him hog-tied by brass in the Pentagon."

In particular, Morse said, he would eliminate a provision construed as prohibiting the transfer of Marines or naval aviators to other branches. The provision, he added, guarantees division of command and authority and assures "perpetuation of duplication."

The section does not mention the Marines or naval aviators by name. But it is understood to have been put in after reports that such transfers were contemplated by Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson.

Acts For Efficiency

Morse contended Johnson must have the power to transfer personnel or assign duties as he thinks best in the interest of efficiency and economy.

A combat veteran of the last war, Senator Lodge (R., Mass.), called the present ban on transfers a "joker" and a "military atrocity." He said he had been unable to find any reason for it other than that Committee Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) had told him the bill couldn't get out of the committee without it.

Morse said that Forrestal, first Secretary of Defense, would have been "able to do the job I know he was struggling to do" if Congress had given him sufficient authority in the original unification law of 1947.

Rites Today For Forrestal

the former cabinet officer was necessary if Forrestal was to be cured of a psycho-neurotic depressive condition.

Military funeral services for Forrestal will be at 11 a. m. in the Arlington cemetery amphitheater and will be public. Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, who succeeded Forrestal, yesterday said that all National Military Establishment employes who can be spared from duty will be excused at 10 a. m. for the funeral.

The burial rites will be limited to members of the Forrestal family, the President and Mrs. Truman, a few friends, and a group of high Government officials.

Bishop to Officiate

The Right Rev. Wallace E. Conkling, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Chicago, will officiate at both services.

The body will be transferred from a hearse to a motorized caisson at the cemetery gates as an Army artillery unit fires a 19-gun salute.

An honor guard of Army, Navy and Air Force units will escort the body to the Amphitheater, and the Army, Navy and Marine Corps bands will play.

A Marine bugler will blow Taps at the graveside, and a Marine Corps firing squad will fire three volleys as the body is lowered to the grave.

Enlisted Men Bearers

Two enlisted men each of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines will serve as bearers.

The 22 honorary bearers invited to serve include Herbert Hoover, former President; George C. Marshall, former Secretary of State, and Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson.

Others are Bernard M. Baruch, James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State; Kenneth C. Royall and Robert P. Patterson, one-time Army Secretaries; John L. Sullivan, retiring Navy Secretary; Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower; John J. McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of State; Artemus Gates, former Navy Assistant Secretary; Undersecretary of Commerce Cornelius V. Whitney; James A. Farley, former Postmaster General; Robert A. Lovett, former Undersecretary of State, and Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy.

Johnson to Reply To Plane Charges

By the United Press

The Senate Armed Services Committee has asked Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson to answer within a week or 10 days charges in connection with aircraft procurement, it was disclosed yesterday.

Johnson agreed to give a full report on the purchase program in so far as possible without revealing military secrets.

Johnson was called before the committee Monday after it received reports that "too many" plane contracts are being granted Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp. Johnson is a former director of the company.

Johnson conferred with President Truman yesterday for 40 minutes. He said afterward it was a routine conference.

One source said the committee decided to give Johnson an opportunity to reply to the reports and, at the same time, expressed its full confidence in his ability to answer them.

The committee was represented as concerned whether Johnson is taking too much of the Nation's security on the success or failure of the Air Force's giant B-36 long-range bomber, a Consolidated product.

The B-36 is the major strategic bombing weapon of the Air Force and orders for it recently were increased. Orders for the Boeing Aircraft Corp., B-50 have been cut.

The Air Force announced on April 12 that, with Mr. Truman's approval, it was ordering 39 more B-36s. This made 169 of the huge bombers delivered or on order.

The estimated 172 million dollars for the B-36s was made available by the January 11 cancellation of 300 billion dollars in contracts for other planes. The rest was used to put four jet engines on early models of the B-36 and to modify B-50s.

The committee decided to call in Johnson after it rejected a proposal by Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) for an inquiry by an independent board.

Tydings suggested that six experts, one each from the Army, Navy and Air Force, and three civilians, be named to gather answers to 100 questions on aircraft procurement.

PX Subsidy Data Revealed

A House Armed Services subcommittee yesterday produced evidence that the taxpayers are subsidizing Army and Navy post exchanges and commissaries.

A subcommittee investigator reported that the subsidy on the armed forces' cut-rate grocery stores runs to more than $4,800,000 a year for workers' salaries alone. In addition, the Government provides free light, heat and other services.

His report was submitted as the subcommittee opened an investigation into the $329,000,000 annual business of service stores within the United States.

Private retailers have complained that the stores give them unfair competition by selling a wide range of articles, tax-free and at near-wholesale cost. They also claim that unauthorized persons buy at the PX's, either directly or through friends.

Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), chairman of the full Armed Services Committee, said the commissaries, or grocery stores, could wipe out their $4,800,000 deficit if they raised the prices 6 or 7 per cent.

Furthermore, he said, the increase would bring their prices in line with those of commercial chain grocery stores.

Spokesmen for three big retail organizations are scheduled to testify Thursday. Retailers have objected to the tax exemptions granted the stores and the Treasury Department also reportedly is interested in that angle.

Within the continental United States, the Army and Air Force operate 179 PXs, the Marine Corps 48, and the Navy 147 Ship's Service stores. The services also operate 209 commissaries.

file of alleged cruelty cases in medical laboratories in cities throughout the country.

Dr. Charles F. Morgan, physiology professor at Georgetown Medical School, told the committee that medical institutions and schools here need about 1500 dogs annually for medical research and training.

Expulsion Is Penalty

Dr. Morgan further emphasized that any medical student found to be abusing animals is subject to expulsion.

Dr. Walter M. Bocker of Howard University joined Dr. Morgan in support of the bill. He challenged opponents to show "one bit of evidence derived from the mass gassing of dogs at the District pound each year."

Representative Miller had testified earlier that the local pound destroys about 5000 dogs and 6000 cats annually.

Admiral H. L. Pugh, Deputy Surgeon General of the Navy, backed the bill to the limit, declaring that the issue of gassing dogs at the pound or turning them over to medical research resolved itself in "Do we want soap or fertilizer or salvation from cancer and other diseases."

More than 20 witnesses, about evenly divided for and against the bill, took the stand yesterday.

The hearing will continue today, beginning at 10 a. m.

Head of ASCAP Outlines Purpose Of Organization

Fred E. Ahlert, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, put forth the credo and purpose of his organization at a luncheon meeting of the National Press Club yesterday.

"ASCAP is a voluntary, nonprofit association of the composers and authors of musical works and their publishers," he said. "It functions as a clearing house for the licensing of public performance of members' copyrighted music."

In its credo, Ahlert said, ASCAP "at transcends the profit-making motive. The society tries to foster and safeguard the musical talent of American youth and aspires to preserve the American of freedom of thought and expression, he said.

Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, ace songwriting team, were present at the luncheon and performed some of their compositions.

Carrier Who Kept 5000 Letters Gets 3-Year Rest in Jail

Los Angeles, May 24 (AP).—Postman William E. Lilley, jr.'s, tired tootsies will get a three-year rest.

The veteran of 20 years in the postal service was sentenced to that term yesterday on a charge of delaying and hindering the United States mail. The "rest" will be spent in the Tucson, Ariz., prison camp.

Postal inspectors, who arrested him March 27, said they found some 5000 unopened letters in his apartment.

Lilley explained his feet got tired so he took some of them home, fully intending to deliver them "in the due course of time."

year. He also provided $100,000 for teacher salary increases, but left it up to the county council to provide the $25,000 asked by Montgomery Junior College.

McNayr proposes to finance the school program entirely from the 10-cent tax-rate increase, which would be used to finance new bond issues for schools, and would also pay for highway, storm drainage capital outlay and for plan money for two new county buildings.

McNayr pointed out that he expected one million dollars more in county funds during the next fiscal year because of increased property assessments.

This money will be used to pay "for newly created departments set up to meet long neglected services and generally increased costs in government."

McNayr set out his school construction program in a 1949-54 capital budget totaling $23,039,000. Major items in the program are schools, $17,287,000; roads, $3,572,000; acquisition of public parking lots in Bethesda, $800,000, and county office and health buildings (slated for the 1950-51 budget) at $750,000 and $400,000, respectively.

Immediate projects for the new year, in addition to school construction, would be $700,000 for roads and storm drainage; $30,000 for preliminary plans for the two new county buildings, and $200,000 to complete the public parking-lot program in Silver Spring.

Major changes in he county's new departments, under the budget submitted by McNayr, were hiring of two assistant county attorneys, at salaries of $7500 and $5300; establishment of a division of fire protection, at $10,425; including hiring a fire marshall at $4800; and hiring a $9000-a-year public works director.

Second Man Convicted In Farnsworth Slaying

Guam, May 24 (U.P.).—Pvt. Calvin Dennis, 27, one of three Negro Air Force men accused of the sex-slaying of pretty Ruth Farnsworth, was found guilty today by a general court martial and sentenced to hang.

The court-martial board found Dennis, of Seguin, Tex., guilty on all counts of the Articles of War sections dealing with rape and murder on a Government reservation.

Dennis' brother, Herman, 20, of Calvert, Tex., had similarly been found guilty earlier and sentenced to death for his part in the crime.

Radiocobalt Found Safer Than Radium

Radioactive cobalt is proving itself to be safer, more comfortable and more easily adaptable than costly radium in the treatment of cancers, it was reported here yesterday.

Dr. William G. Myers, of Columbus, a co-discoverer of the atomic product, gave first public report of its research progress at a luncheon meeting of the Ohio State Alumni Club of Washington, at Hotel Sheraton.

Whether or not Cobalt-60, with its half-life of 5.3 years, is cheaper than naturally-occurring radium, with a half-life of 1600 years, is debatable, Dr. Myers told the alumni.

Regarding safety comparisons, he said the artificially produced substance offers fewer hazards to research workers, doctors and patients because it gives off less potent beta rays—health injurious component—in relation to its output of the cancer cell destroyers, gamma rays. Another factor, he said, is that the radiocobalt needles can be magnetized and manipulated at a distance by physicians and research workers with electromagnetic extenders.

The lower beta ray potential permits clinical use of radiocobalt needles only half as thick as those containing radium, a distinct comfort factor to the patient, Dr. Myers reported.

Finally, he concluded, the fact that cobalt wire can be "worked cold" (before it is made radioactive) makes possible the fashioning of special meshes capable of irradiating whole tumor areas.

Nerves Store Memory, Say Brain Probers

Montreal, May 24 (AP).—Discovery of how nerves store memory was reported to the American Psychiatric Association today.

The discovery was made with electrical probes, fine wires with a slight electrical current, touching human brain surfaces exposed during operations for epilepsy.

The probes drew forth old and forgotten memories almost like taking cards from a filing case.

Double Filing System

In fact, Dr. Walker Penfield, head of the McGill University Neurological Institute, where the work was done, said the brain carries memories in a complete double filing system. There is one on each side of the head. These are called the temporal lobes.

A stenographer, whose brain was laid bare under local anesthesia, so that she remained conscious, exclaimed when one part of the temporal lobe was touched, that she could hear music.

Asked where it came from she replied some sort of music box. She did not know until after the operation that this music came from her own brain, and that she alone could hear it.

Seem to Form Patterns

A young man at a memory touch clapped his hands and exclaimed: "I'm going to have some of that!"

Asked what "that" meant, he replied: "It smells like chicken in a chicken coop."

Dr. Penfield theorized that the nerves seem to form memory patterns through a group of fibers in one of the memory filing areas. There are millions of these fibers in the human brain, mostly short, and connected by links called synapses, so that all sorts of patterns are possible.

House Votes to Return Grain Storage Power

The House yesterday passed a compromise bill restoring to the Commodity Credit Corp. authority to acquire grain storage facilities as part of the Government's farm price support program.

The measure now goes to the Senate, whose conferees accepted in a Senate-House conference a provision returning control of the agency to the Secretary of Agriculture. As originally passed by the Senate, the CCC would have been independent of the Secretary.

Paper From Scrub Oak Exhibited in Congress

A small piece of paper was exhibited in Congress yesterday.

Representative Sikes (D., Fla.) told the House it was the first white paper to be made in Florida from scrub oak. It was made in University of Florida laboratories.

"Scrub oak is one of a number of so-called inferior hardwoods which occupy hundreds of thousands of acres in this Nation, and for which at present there is practically no market," Sims said.

Medical Center Site Hunters Will Inspect Gallaudet Land

Hospital planners here, dismayed by prospects of a three-year wait for Naval Observatory grounds, are looking for a new site for their 20-million-dollar medical center.

That was disclosed yesterday with the news that the planners have arranged to inspect the acreage of Gallaudet College, sole college for the deaf in the United States, at 7th st. and Florida ave. ne., as a possible alternative site.

Dr. Leonard M. Elstad, the college president, said the inspection tour would be made Thursday by a steering committee of 15 representatives of Episcopal, Garfield and Emergency Hospitals. Merger of the three hospitals is planned for the new medical center.

Though Gallaudet College does not use all of its 93 acres, Dr. Elstad said, its future expansion plans would not permit loss of any large tract such as the 30 acres needed for the District Medical Center.

Initially, the planners proposed that the medical center be erected at the Naval Observatory grounds.

The Symphony Spirit

The National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund campaign for the 1949-50 season is within touching distance of its $175,000 target. Pledges and cash already received total more than $161,000, about 92 per cent of the goal. A final push will assure victory by the end of the month. We urge everyone who has been putting off action not to do so any longer.

The prospective success of the fund drive is but one of the encouraging signs that the National Symphony is becoming truly a community institution. In the same space of time last year $148,690 had been received from 7655 contributors. This year the present total has come from 9025 individual subscribers, an increase of 17.8 per cent in the numerical base of support.

Not enough can be said, of course, in praise of the generosity of the large givers. Mr. Frank Jelleff's magnificent act in underwriting this summer's Watergate series is an outstanding example. There are others, too, whose names deserve to be mentioned. But all of them would be among the first to say that the orchestra really belongs to all the people and should get just as wide support as possible.

There are other evidences that the National Symphony is coming to be recognized as a valued community asset. The Board of Trade this year entered the fund campaign with a stronger effort to reach the business interests. A number of labor unions have for the first time made contributions and exercised a vote in the association.

The board of directors, too, has a new unity and promise. Mr. Finkenstaedt, who has had to lay down the presidency because his devoted efforts took too much time from his business, has a worthy successor in Mr. Raymond Cox. And, finally, the glittering improvement in programming promised by Mr. Howard Mitchell and the fine list of guest conductors for next year make the orchestra's future a bright prospect.

Treaty With Brazil

One of the fruits of President Dutra's visit is the announcement that Brazil and the United States will negotiate a treaty to stimulate the "mutually beneficial flow" of private investment capital to Brazil. Such a treaty can be of great importance in setting a pattern for the implementation of President Truman's Point IV program. Beyond the technical assistance which this country expects to furnish, private capital must have a major share in carrying Point IV projects to consummation.

Brazil offers exceptional opportunities both for an expansion of American investment and applied technical aid because of the disposition the Brazilians have shown to help themselves. Indeed, many inter-American enterprises, such as the agricultural projects of Nelson Rockefeller, already are in operation there. It is apparent, however, that the realization of much of the country's potential depends on aid beyond the financial resources of the Brazilians themselves or what they can obtain from the World Bank and Export-Import Bank. A case in point is the Sao Francisco Valley development, which holds great promise as a source of electric power and stimulus for industrialization.

The economic policies agreed upon at last year's inter-American conference at Bogota set the broad framework for inducements to private capital. However, the general phrases of this agreement need to be spelled out in bilateral treaties. In point of fact the barriers to private investment in Brazil are not nearly so extensive as elsewhere in Latin America—for example, Argentina. Brazil itself guarantees investors payment in the event of expropriation, and the present limitation on profits that may be taken out of the country is a temporary restriction occasioned by the dollar shortage. What is necessary is to consult investors themselves and remove all possible restrictions by common agreement, and beyond that, to evangelize the investment opportunities.

In this connection it is encouraging to note the position in support of bilateral treaties taken by Curtis Calder, chairman of the board of the Electric Bond & Share Co. Mr. Calder emphasizes that adequate assurances of fair treatment can be obtained without the United States underwriting investors against loss. Such assurances include currency stabilization, statements of the principles of fair treatment and the obligations of foreign investors, free entry of technicians, guarantees of free convertibility of profits into dollars and workable machinery for settling disputes. The determination of Presidents Truman and Dutra to go ahead along, we assume, similar lines, will hasten the employment of more American dollars to the mutual benefit of the Brazilians, the investors and Brazilian-American relations.

Home-Rule Hope

Senators McGrath and Kefauver appear to have breathed a new breath of life into the District home-rule bill by carrying their appeal for its enactment at this session of Congress before the Majority Policy Committee of the Senate. Senator Taft, too, has again expressed his deep interest in the measure. Senator Holland has done some excellent behind-the-scenes work in behalf of the bill, and Majority Leader Lucas, with the support of the Policy Committee, has promised to try to sandwich it into the Senate's schedule this week or next. This is extraordinarily good news. It indicates that the leaders of the Senate have thoughtfully surveyed the situation confronting themselves as well as the District. If Congress as a whole will examine the home-rule problem in this spirit, we suspect that the conclusion will be that it cannot afford to ignore this issue through another year.

The muddle in Congress over the sales tax dramatized one aspect of the issue. In spite of the great pressure of national and international legislation, the Senate spent nearly a week on the District's revenue bill. To be sure, some members are saying that because of this there will be no time for the home-rule bill at this session. But that is a very short-sighted view. For in the wake of the tax bill come many other local measures that Congress ought to enact. For example, the Senate has just approved and sent to the House bills to permit continued operation of six child-care centers and to let the District government kill weeds on private property. These must be followed by various others of similar nature. Often when such comparatively minor bills have been enacted by both houses they have to go to conference, and of course they always have to be signed by the overworked President. It is incredibly wasteful to force measures of this sort through our national law-making machinery. Yet so long as Congress clings to its burden as city council for the District, it can not dodge petty issues without disastrous local consequences.

If Congress looks at only this one aspect of the situation from its own selfish point of view, it cannot fail to pass a home-rule bill at the present session. We do not suggest, however, that this is the heart of the matter. It is not. Even the extra burden upon Congress is insignificant beside the continued deprivation of this community of its right to participate in its own local government. Let Congress remember that it is sponsoring a great celebration in Washington next year under the title of the Freedom Fair. Unless the home-rule bill is enacted at this session, the United States will be inviting all the world to a festival of freedom in a city in which the right to vote does not exist. The very suggestion of freedom without the franchise is a mockery of the word.

Visitors of the Freedom Fair would be constantly reminded that a government of its own was included in the vision of the founding fathers for this Capital City; that home-rule actually existed in the District for more than 70 years when only a handful of people lived here; that now upward of 900,000 persons are deprived of suffrage rights. Such a record of retrogression, with nothing done about it in Congress over a period of many decades, would make the sesquicentennial Freedom Fair a hollow sham. We beg the Congress to look seriously at this flagrant contradiction of American principles in its own home bailiwick before casually assuming that there is no time to enact the home-rule bill.

The question boils down to belief or disbelief in our own American principles. If the right of the people to govern themselves means anything, it ought to have the same meaning in the District of Columbia as it has in Virginia or Minnesota. Sometimes emergencies make temporary suspension of suffrage imperative. But to perpetuate such an emergency measure over three quarters of a century, as Congress has done in the case of the District, and then to invite the world to a Freedom Fair in the spot where the chief badge of freedom has vanished, would be a dose of cynicism that no Congress could reasonably defend before the people. Yet that is precisely the predicament in which Congress and the Capital will find themselves if the home-rule bill is not enacted.

Prodding The CSC

Congressman Walter denies that he brought any pressure upon the Civil Service Commission to have his opponent in the last election, Roy E. James, dismissed from his $8500 job in the Army Department. "All I did," says Mr. Walter, "was ask the Civil Service Commission what qualifications are required for the position James is holding and what qualifications James possesses." Regardless of what the facts may be, the dismissal of Mr. James under these circumstances carries an impression of spite work that should not creep into the administration of the Civil Service system.

Spokesmen for the commission insist that Mr. James did not meet its requirements for the job to which he was assigned. He was appointed as a programming specialist by the Army Department under an arrangement which permits the reinstatement of classified employes without immediate approval of the CSC. This job, officials say, calls for special training and experience in the industrial commodity field which Mr. James did not possess. When Congressman Walter raised the issue, the commission's examining division investigated the case and initiated the order to have Mr. James either dismissed or transferred.

This explanation by itself seems reasonable and convincing, and it is possible that the net result would have been the same if no powerful Congressman had intervened. Nevertheless, Mr. Walter's connection with the case gives it an unavoidable political tincture that no amount of explanation is likely to dispel. Members of Congres ought to realize, before they take a hand in any case before the CSC, that the effect is to make it more difficult for the commission to do its duty in addition to raising serious question as to their own motives.

Foster Manifesto

We now have it straight from the horse's mouth that Communists do not advocate the forcible overthrow of the United States Government. William Z. Foster himself has answered this $64 question. "The new tactical line of the world Communist movement," says the national chairman of the Communist Party in the United States, is that communism "is inevitable, war or no war." Consequently, it is no longer necessary to assume that a horrible orgy of bloodletting will be necessary to bring the "blessings" of sovietization to the American people.

Mr. Foster admits, however, that there may be some conditions under which the sword he pretends to sheath might again be drawn. His basic premise seems to be that the future belongs to the Commies and they prefer to take it peacefully. "But if capitalist reaction and violence forces (sic) them to fight for socialism, then fight they will, and as history shows, successfully." But, of course, any slaughter arising from such a clash would be the fault of the wicked capitalists. Communists, says Mr. Foster, are "always and instinctively the champions of peace and democracy. This is true even when they have to wage wars and revolutions against barbarous oppressors and exploiters." In other words, if the policeman interferes while a thug called communism is robbing Freeman of his future, the policeman will be a Fascist murderer and will have to be liquidated. But that will not be violence. Mr. Foster appears to regard such business as only a fulfillment of an iron-curtain version of manifest destiny.

This drivel is presumably put out in connection with the trial of Mr. Foster's fellow leaders of the Communist Party on charges of conspiracy to teach overthrow of the Government by violence. But it inevitably becomes a sort of platform on which the Communist Party is bidding for the support and allegiance of the American people. It asks them to abandon their common sense as well as their freedom. If Mr. Foster's logic were the greatest asset of the Communist movement in the United States, there would be little need for concern about it. The fact is, however, that Mr. Foster is merely a babbling fount for a stream that runs deeply under ground.

Language Revival

The revival of a dying language, or one already dead, is not impossible under given circumstances, though neither of these circumstances is present in Ireland, where the experiment is being made. History offers at least two examples. One is medieval Latin, which had an enormous practical value as a means of written and spoken communication among the educated classes of every part of European Christendom. The movement, which began with the Renaissance scholars to restore Latin to its classical purity, was probably one of several reasons leading to its second demise.

The other example is the revival of Hebrew in Israel to provide a common speech for Jews from every part of the world. Yiddish would not have served the purpose, because large sections of Jewry, for example, the Sephardim, were wholly ignorant of it. However, to make it suitable to modern conditions Hebrew had to be vastly revised in structure and the manufacture of neologisms put upon a systematic basis. Thus the difference between the demotic Hebrew now spoken in Israel and Scriptural Hebrew is said to be far greater than between Medieval and Golden Age Latin or between modern Greek and the Koine of the Gospels and the Attic Greek of the Platonic dialogues.

But in Ireland the conditions which made possible and even necessary the revival of Latin and Hebrew are absent. For English already provides the means of communication between the Irishman who has the Gaelic and the Irishman who has none, and for that matter between the Irishman and almost any foreigner, for English of a sort is rapidly becoming the lingua franca of the world.

And here we come to another paradox. There are many who think that the emergence of English as a world language has killed it idiomatically, despite the efforts at rescue by the late brothers Fowler and others. Generally speaking, idiomatic English, or as it is sometimes called, standard English, is the language which has resulted from the evolution of the East-Midlands or Kentish dialect which has been the medium of most of the great poets from Chaucer to the Victorians. But now it is said that in England itself the idiom is being abandoned by the young. However, one place where it flourishes in something close to purity is Dublin. There, at any rate, the ghost of Milton or Dryden or Dr. Johnson would find less to offend its ear than in London or even Oxford.

Atomic Fellowships

Ever since the question of Federal financial aid to the States for educational purposes began to be considered seriously, one of the major points of opposition has been that it is only a small step from Federal aid to Federal control.

The reply to this has always been with good reason that nothing very drastic has ever befallen the land-grant colleges as a result of their grants and that the Government does not attempt to prescribe any particular method of instruction for its veterans' scholarship students.

This answer can no longer be made. The Congress is showing, by its wrangling over the award to a professed Communist of an Atomic Energy Commission fellowship, that it is entirely probable that any future educational aid bill will carry provisos limiting the recipiency of grants for advanced study to persons falling into certain categories delineated by considerations other than ability. That is, not belonging to a group to which it is unfashionable to belong.

Without defending a thing that this particular holder of an Atomic Energy Commission fellowship believes or stands for politically, it is safe to say that both he and the United States will benefit from his study about as much as from that of any other student of equal scholastic ability. As for security, the study of the theory of relativity is available to anyone able to comprehend it.

Outlawing "Negro"

Several days ago a leper stood before a congressional committee urging that the Federal Government ban the use of the word "leper." He said the word "leper" should be removed from the dictionary because of its unjust and shameful stigma which hurts its victims and efforts to control and wipe the disease out.

For a similar reason, I am urging The Washington Post and others willing to advance our interests and deal justly with our group to stop using the word "Negro." The word is a misnomer from every point of view. It does not represent a country or anything else except one single, solitary color. And no one color can describe the various and varied complexions in our group.

There are at least two strong reasons why I object to designating our group as Negroes. If a man is a Negro, it follows that a woman is a Negress. "Negress" is an ugly, repulsive word—virtually a term of degradation and reproach.

In the second place, I object to the word Negro because our meanest detractors and most cruel persecutors insist that we shall be called by that name, so that they can humiliate us by referring contemptuously to us as "niggers," or "Negras" as Bilbo used to do.

A distinguished man of the dominant race wrote his views on this point to the New York Herald Tribune several months ago. "Granting," he said, "that racial prejudice is taking a fearful toll on the Nation's productivity, admitted that this discrimination is a blighting mockery to our professions as a Christian country and a damning reproach to our one-world leadership, what are we going to do about it?"

"There is one simple thing that all Americans who love their country can do about it. They can destroy the basic cause of the Nation's prejudice. They can right the basic concept of the public mind toward the Afro-American by calling him and giving him the name of "American," not Negro.

Friendship House

Political scenery so dominates Washington that it is easy to miss the most deserving persons who make the Nation's Capital a very human place. I refer to the fortieth anniversary of the service of Miss Lydia Burklin as executive director of Friendship House.

Miss Burklin is our Washington "Jane Addams." The following sentence is carried on the stationery as the ideal of Friendship House: "Friendship is not only a noble and beautiful thing for an individual, but the realization of it is the ideal for the Nation."

For 40 years Miss Burklin has demonstrated the magic touch of real leadership in bringing Friendship House to its nationally recognized place among community settlement houses of the country.

Washington needs few things more than an increase of Friendship Houses.

Consider this service, for example: Friendly counseling of young and old; day care for children of employed parents; supervised daily recreation for varied ages; a meeting place for community groups and family parties. Friendship House is nonsectarian and on its staff and among the board are Catholic, Jewish and Protestant people. The average weekly program reaches 2000 different individuals. In 1948 by count a total of 99,652 different people crossed the threshold of Friendship House.

Federal Labor Costs

The following figures may throw light on where considerable cuts may be made in Government squandering, especially in view of the most excessive labor costs where a man higher up in the Government is given a raise in his salary when he increases the number of employes under him and his salary is reduced if he reduces the number of his employes.

Can anyone develop a more striking instance of total Government inefficiency?

Welfare State

We have all seen in the last 17 to 20 years the phenomenon of people becoming dependent on Government aid in the forms of charity, public assistance, unemployment compensation, and WPA.

At first such means of assistance was appreciated and justified, but the tragedy of such measures is that people who are on the weak side tend to accept such measures as their inalienable rights.

Here then lies the great danger; with each generation there is a great increase in the number of people with this philosophy. This increases the load on the rest of the people and the country suffers from an ever-increasing loss of productive man power.

To my mind there is only one answer—education. Millions of low-cost homes can be built by the Government, even more extensive relief measures can be enacted, and people can be forced to contribute part of their wage to health insurance, but such measures are not permanent answers to social betterment, slum clearance, or public health.

Such measures are a temporary help it is true, but when continued year after year they tend to expand in scope until they become an unbearable drain on the wealth of the Nation without a reasonable return in the form of improvement.

How much better it would be, both logically and economically, to maintain these kinds of social legislation at a minimum, restrict it to those in actual need, and apply the billions saved to improve all the schools and standardize the teaching facilities—all over the country at an equal and high level.

It is only through proper education that we can ever expect to raise the general level of intelligence, and it is only by elevating the intelligence that people get increased ambition, learn new and better ways to live, and find ways to better their position. This is the only permanent way to erase our slums, improve our health, and have all our people pulling their own weight.

"Solomon In Africa"

Mr. Abed Bouhafa's letter published May 24 is in error in saying that there was a "subtle reservation" in the U. N. Assembly resolution to make Libya independent in 10 years. Originally the resolution did provide for Libyan independence in 10 years only if the Assembly "then decides that this step is appropriate." This proviso was deleted, however, before the final defeat of the resolution.

World Decline In Patriarchs

By Malvina Lindsay

Family Democracy

THE FAMILY autocrat, whether man, woman or state, is getting more and more wing clipping from social and political forces throughout the world. The new German constitution takes care of the rights of women and juveniles and of parents in direct contradiction to Hitler's pattern. The state is only to "watch over" the family, not direct it, says the constitution, and parents are to have full care and upbringing of children and to decide whether they shall receive religious instruction.

German women, after long subservience to husbands, are granted equal rights with men. "No one may be prejudiced or privileged because of sex," states the constitution. Since women outnumber men three to two in Germany, this gives them great political power—if they use it. Their increasing responsibilities may force them to do so. There seems no opportunity ahead for them to retreat to kinder, kirche, kucken.

Rumbles of revolution in family life come from all parts of the world. The Japanese are now adapting themselves to life without father's or grandfather's dictation. This means more personal freedom, also more responsibility. Family members are on their own, and many are bewildered. If they can't support themselves, they must look to the state rather than to a family head. This plunge into maturity is hard for many Japanese to take, but having tasted the fruits of freedom it is not likely they will return to patriarchal autocracy.

IN THE Middle East, where patriarchal power has been strongly entrenched, there is the beginning of change. Freedom of choice in marriage, mothers' rights over children, women's voice in divorce and in control of their earnings and property—all these are being talked of in conclaves of veiled and unveiled women.

Significant resolutions on human rights were recently presented by the Women's Committee of Lebanon at a special conference of Middle East women held in Beirut in connection with the meeting of the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women. This conference was attended by women leaders of Lebanon, Syria, Iran, Iraq and by commission delegates from Greece and Turkey.

Social rights were listed first in these resolutions. The need for action on them was related to the changing status of the family. Calling the family the "basic unit of society," the Lebanon women pointed out that it was going through serious testing as the new industrial era imposed itself on a society unprepared for it.

The Lebanon women recommended that the Commission on the Status of Women request the Secretary General of the United Nations to submit a questionnaire to member nations to determine benefits and harm to the family resulting from the industrialization of society, and to draft a study of the results. The resolutions adroitly stressed the need for women to prepare themselves to safeguard family life in its new milieu by attaining equal status with men in political, economic, social and cultural fields.

IN THIS country family democracy is being served in one way by the new emphasis on men's responsibility in the home. The forgotten father is coming to the front as shorter working hours, the current revolt against "Momism," and the teachings of child psychology give him new status.

However, this country, long in the forefront in the development of the industrial age family, is also having to adapt itself to further family transition. The reorganization of the American family is by no means completed, as was emphasized at recent conferences of educators, physicians, lawyers, social scientists.

Outside pressures, such as agriculture, social mores, church dictum, that once held families together have been weakened, and the family now must build an inner unity that will hold in a shifting world. Also, as the power of patriarchs—and matriarchs—declines, and the buttresses of family fortunes weaken, individuals increasingly are being thrust on their own. They must be prepared to take care of themselves economically and to withstand the psychic stresses of life. They also must have more education and training in human relationships, which alone will have to sustain many a marriage of tomorrow.

"Capitalist Morality"

I refer to a letter in your May 20 paper captioned "Capitalist Morality."

Now that forces within the Roman Catholic Church have chosen to denounce capitalism along with communism, I would like to ask what form of economy does the Roman Catholic Church advocate?

In spite of the church's loud and determined opposition to communism, it does seem strange that the second strongest Communist movement is in Italy—Italy which houses the Vatican, the seat of the Roman Catholic Church. The majority of Italians are Catholic—but yet, outside of Russia, Italy has the strongest, most ardent, Communist Party.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

A Dark Lesson

THERE IS A SIMPLE parellel for the tragic death of James Forrestal. A century and a quarter ago Lord Castlereagh, the leading member of the British Cabinet that had defeated Napoleon and brought peace to Europe, died in almost precisely similar circumstances.

The Duke of Wellington, his friend and partner, was the first to notice that the gigantic burdens he had borne so long were telling upon Castlereagh. The story goes that when Castlereagh talked strangely during a discussion of government business the blunt Wellington told him that he sounded unhinged, and that he ought to see a doctor. Whereat poor Castlereagh put down his head in his arms for a moment, and then answered sadly, "My God, Arthur, I believe you are right."

Wellington warned Castlereagh's staff, but people in those days had no remedy for melancholia. Tht private secretaries merely concealed their master's pistols and razors. And late one evening, after dining with his friends, the man who shared with Pitt and Nelson and Wellington the chief credit for destroying the Napoleonic tyranny went into the darkened library of his country house and cut his throat with the little knife kept for sharpening quill pens.

THE EPISODE is worth remembering now as proof from an earlier time rather similar to ours that the burdens of office in periods of great crisis are sometimes too heavy for the stoutest spirits. It is not enough, however, merely to recall Forrestal's great services to this country, and to acknowledge that the strongest man might have cracked under the strains to which he was subjected.

The question arises whether these strains might have been lessened by a wiser Congress, a more restrained press, and a more intelligent public attitude toward our public servants. There can be only one answer, in the affirmative.

The truth is that the kind of public service Jim Forrestal sought to give—disinterested, professional, imaginative, and in scale with this Nation's great role—is made as unrewarding as possible. Government has not, in the past, been very important to us in America. And although the American Government now has our own and the world's destinies in its hands, the habit has persisted of treating the best men in the Government as a set of dubious payrollers and hacks.

The second-raters, of whom there are certainly enough to go round, escape well enough. They almost seem, indeed, to be preferred to the first-raters. It is these, with their alarming signs of intelligence and dangerous tendency to have ideas, that the Congress habitually treats as guilty until they prove themselves innocent. It is the first-raters who customarily have to spend infinite time they need for their own work proving to the Congress they are not subversive or worse.

THEN the country takes its good public servants for granted, offers them no thanks and makes no complaint about the second- and third-raters. And certain kinds of politician, and certain elements of the press almost seem to scorn to restrain themselves in their attacks upon men they dislike. The attacks upon Forrestal, if considerably lower in literary value, were almost as virulent and unjust as Shelley's famous lines on Castlereagh, in The Mask of Anarchy:

"I met murder on the way;
He had a mask like Castlereagh,
Very smooth he looked yet grim,
Seven bloodhounds followed him.
. . . one by one, and two by two
He threw them human hearts to chew
Which from his wide cloak he drew."

It was not only the burden of his responsibility; it was also the pettiness and injustice and ingratitude for a good job well done that killed Forrestal. Those who know him well, and remembered the vigor with which he attacked his task in the dark days of 1940, could see his strength waning through the last difficult year. He ceased to have reserves of energy sufficient to consider many of the marginal problems that had once interested him. But he was a man who was, above all, serious about the public service, and the improvement of the public service engaged his passionate attention to the end.

He deserves a memorial. Perhaps the suggestion is inappropriate at a moment when the aim seems to be to drive out of Government every intelligent and disinterested man—as witness the new outburst of enmity against David E. Lilienthal. Nonetheless, the best memorial to Forrestal will be the formation of a new American habit of treating the first-raters in our Government with the respect they deserve. That way, there may be more of them.

Roach Killer Called Best Yet

A new insecticide, chlordane, is the most effective killer yet discovered for cockroaches and ants, the Department of Agriculture said yesterday.

It also "shows promise" against carpet beetles and clothes moths as well as other household insect pests, the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine reported.

"Two per cent chlordane sprays, with oil or water base, are now on sale in many department, drug and hardware stores," the bureau reported. "Both evaporate after spraying, leaving an invisible, odorless film on surfaces that kills pests coming into contact with it."

Department officials declined to state whether the new pest killer had been used in department lunchrooms, which are notorious for their numerous and big roaches.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Forrestal And Lilienthal

IF HUMAN BEINGS are capable of learning from experience, then there is an important lesson to be learned from the tragedy of Jamse Forrestal. It gets down to the real meaning of that tragedy which has scarcely been touched on in the comment on the last act of despair.

Childs

Forrestal had come to believe that he was being persecuted. This took such an exaggerated form as to be a major symptom of his mental illness.

But to perfectly rational observers it was evident that, in the last months he served as Secretary of National Defense, Forrestal was under an attack that amounted to persecution. Certain press and radio commentators had set out to "get Forrestal." While their motives may have been clothed in sublime self-righteousness, the facts nevertheless speak for themselves.

How much these attacks had to do with driving Forrestal out of office no one can say. He had undertaken, as he himself came to understand, an impossible assignment as the first Secretary of Defense, responsible for carrying out unification. When he left he was a broken and defeated man.

TODAY the same kind of a press and radio attack is being directed at David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. It comes from quite different elements of press and radio. It has not yet reached the degree of personal innuendo and vilification that characterized the windup of the Forrestal campaign.

But the motivation seems to be the same—to "get Lilienthal." If he cannot be driven out of office, then an atmosphere will be created in which it will be impossible for him to serve further when his term expires a year from this June 30.

The parallels seem to me to be too important to be ignored. In a sense Lilienthal's assignment as the first chairman of the first civilian commission to take over the enormously difficult and complicated and frighteningly secret atomic project, is as "impossible" as Forrestal's task.

Forrestal was attacked as a symbol of big business and high finance with constant innuendo about deals in oil. Lilienthal is attacked as a symbol of the New Deal and the radicalism of the Roosevelt Administration, with repeated hints that because of his political convictions he cannot be trusted with secrets involving the Nation's security.

The outline of the campaign is fairly clear. The loss of a minute quantity of uranium-235 was exaggrerated and blown up out of all proportion even after official denial had rejected the invented thesis of espionage and theft with which the story was first heralded. Similarly the Freistadt scholarship was given the most exaggerated prominence by those who deliberately seek to discredit Lilienthal and thereby civilian administration of the life-giving or death-dealing force that science has unleashed.

I HEARD one of the instigators of this campaign boast some time ago about the material being assembled that would be used to "get Lilienthal." As a kind of climax to this stage of the attack, Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa has called on Lilienthal to resign. One must credit Hickenlooper with the most conscientious motives, yet the timing of his statement admirably served the campaign.

Press and radio in this country have great power. They dig out the news with a vigor and initiative seen in no other country. But the abuse of that power—when it descends to personal bigotry and personal feud—is a clear and present danger.

The end result may be to drive out of public office capable and conscientious men to the extent that we shall have left only timid hacks or military automatons. This is not to argue that Forrestal was the perfect Secretary of Defense or that Lilienthal is the perfect chairman of the AEC.

It has seemed to many that the commission should tell the public far more than it has about the project as a whole and the atomic bomb. But consider what happens to Lilienthal when he tries to do that, as was done in the commission's last annual report. Ignorant and prejudiced men in the Senate raised a violent outcry that secrets were being given away.

So the commission is caught betwixt and between. Lilienthal is a convenient and conspicuous target. The attack warms up, spiced with malice as yet hardly discernible but more of that can be ladled in later on. Here is an abuse of the democratic process that can jeopardize democracy itself. No wonder the Soviet propaganda radio gets so much useful fodder for the Russian effort to prove to the world that we are a panic-stricken people obsessed with fear.

Florida House OKs Flood Bill

Tallahassee, Fla., May 24 (Spl.). Florida's lower house today passed five acts assuring State cooperation in the flood control projects authorized by the last session of Congress.

The bills were approved by a vote of 80 to 0 and now go to the Florida Senate, which is expected to act Thursday.

The five measures provide for the creation of flood control districts with condemnation and taxing powers for raising matching and maintenance funds.

Congress authorized a 70-million-dollar flood control project for Florida last session and a 4-million-dollar appropriation to carry out the first phases of the project now is in the conference committee. The projects involved affect an area of 15,000 square miles, much of which is subject to flood damage.

In Washington Senator Holland expressed his satisfaction with the action of the Florida house. He said he was "very happy that the State of Florida is moving so promptly and unanimously to meet the conditions imposed by the Federal law passed last year on which appropriations now are pending."

American Security

is in good hands!

IF YOU — along with some 40 million other taxpayers — take a "standard income tax deduction," a man you owe a vote of thanks to is Mr. James R. Turner of the Treasury Department. Young (34 years) Jim Turner is a staff member in the office of the Assistant to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

He was recently given an award by the Junior Board of Commerce after nomination by his grateful department, and we quote, "His ideas for simplification of tax returns and tax computation have saved millions of taxpayers incalculable time and effort, and have saved the Bureau of Internal Revenue millions of dollars in administrative costs.

. . . the remarkable ease and skill with which he discharged onerous responsibilities of every kind within the Bureau are proof of administrative and executive ability which would be amazing in a man of twice his years and experience." Turner is officially credited with the idea of "per capita" exemption, now a fixture of the Federal income tax law; with the idea of the new form for simplified returns; with the streamlined split-income tax table; with the famous "standard deduction" used by 40 million out of 55 million taxpayers; and a host of other innovations which save John Q. Public time and money.

No newcomer to government, Jim Turner has been working with the Bureau of Internal Revenue since 1937. He started as a junior clerk in the Statistical Division and progressed rapidly, being appointed head of the Division in May, 1946. He reorganized the Division along functional lines, with centralized coding and transcribing operations. He introduced new sampling techniques, adapted his Division to each change of the tax laws in recent years, and has successfully met the challenge of a work load that has increased from a pre-war 7 million to 55 million returns today.

Business Outlook

Businessmen Sell America As They Wish It, Not as It Is

By J. A. Livingston

THE main reason that American industry is misunderstood by Americans is that it doesn't understand itself. When it attempts to explain the American system to workers, consumers, teachers, union leaders, politicians, etc., it pulls obvious boners. And these boners, in turn, create doubts and distrust about industry itself.

Consider two recent examples. The McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. argues in an advertisement signed by James H. McGraw, jr., president, that industry must spend 15 billion dollars a year on new plant and equipment to raise the standard of living of all of us.

Livington

But "Washington is taking a course, which, if pursued, will make that investment by industry impossible."

Declares Mr. McGraw: "Government spending cannot improve American living standards. It never has, and it never will. Increasing Government spending now will only block progress, because the Government proposes to pay for its plans by taxing away the profits industry is using, and must continue to use, to improve and expand its plants and equipment." (Italics Mr. McGraw's.)

THE ASSERTION is so sweeping as to be self-defeating. Haven't public highways built with Federal and State funds, helped to increase United States efficiency and the standard of living? Also, public schools, sewage systems, waterworks, the development of rivers, harbors, and canals? Mr. McGraw, by an overstatement—or an oversight—tends to cast discredit on his entire advertisement. When the average person notices one error, he's apt to wonder: What about the rest?

An advertisemtnt of the Standard Steel Spring Co. of Coraopolis, Pa.—one of a series designed to sell America to the Americans—is similarly at fault. It says:

"You may think this crusade to regulate and restrict business profits is no concern of yours because you are not a stockholder in business. Well, the critics and social dreamers won't like this one—but let's open it up and take a look."

WHEN YOU TAKE a look, you find Standard Steel Spring committing a commor error. It asserts that 18 million stockholders "own this country's corporations. They are people—average people who have invested their savings in the ability and obligation of business to put their dollars to work and deliver a profit."

Yet less than a year ago the Federal Reserve Board published an estimate that the number of shareholders is only about six million, or 1 out of every 15 adults in the United States. Apparently, the writers of the Standard Steel Spring advertisement were not up to the latest statistics on their subject.

The effect of such a misstatement, however well-meant, is to discredit the whole presentation. The average American, who doesn't own stock, will wonder: "I don't own stock. I know my brother, Jim, doesn't. My father never bought any. Well, who are these 18 million anyway?" Furthermore, the holder of 5 or 10 shares of a stock doesn't consider himself primarily an investor. He thinks of himself as a worker, a farmer, or a professional man.

FORTUNE MAGAZINE recently made the observation that "every businessman, consciously or unconsciously, is on the defensive." That, perhaps, explains the current drive of big business to get on the good side of the public. Yet sometimes, these efforts at public relations are both a cause and a result of group hypnosis, of ideological inbreeding. The businessman talks to himself and to other businessmen. He asserts what he believes and what he wants others to believe without rigorously examining his premises or facts. The psychologist would call it whistling in the dark. And by making misstatements, the businessman raises doubts about himself and his understanding of the system he is trying to perpetuate.

In the final analysis, the best public relations is high employment. People today are wondering: Are we going to have another depression? And if the United States gets through 1949 without widespread unemployment, if we go on to a still higher standard of living (as Mr. McGraw promises), that will be perfect public relations. It will resolve many of the inner doubts about business and businessmen which now prevail among workers, politicians, union leaders and businessmen themselves. For the American system, unlike in 1929-33, will have performed!

Stockholders' Charge Denied By Mayflower

In an answer filed yesterday in District Court, the Mayflower Hotel Corp. denied charges of minority stockholders that there was a conspiracy to defraud them.

Controllin g interest in the Mayflower Hotel was gained by the Hilton Hotels Corp. in December, 1946, in a $2,600,000 transaction.

The Hilton Corp. purchased 200,000 shares of common stock at $13 a share from Donner Estates, Inc. This left 187,738 shares among approximately 1200 minority stockholders.

Three months later, a group of minority stockholders, organized as the Mayflower Hotel Stockholders' Protective Committee, filed suit in District Court. The group charged fraud was involved in the sale of the controlling interest, that efforts had been made to induce them to sell their stock at a "manipulated" price, and that the conspiracy involved operating the 1039-room Connecticut ave. hotel for the primary benefit of the Hilton Corp.

Defendants in the suit, which asked that the sale to the Hilton Corp. be set aside, are the Hilton Corp., the Mayflower Hotel Corp., certain of the officers, and Donner Estates, Inc.

The answer filed yesterday was a denial of virtually all the material facts alleged.

The answer also challenged the jurisdiction of District Court, inasmuch as the headquarters of Donner Estates, Inc., is in Philadelphia, and the principal offices of the Hilton Corp. are in Chicago.

Obedient Boy Kills His Father

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DOYLE TALBERT, 4, of Mount Pleasant, N. C., obeyed the command of his father, Fetzer Lee Talbert, 37, and shot him to death with a .22-caliber rifle minutes after the father slew the boy's mother with the same weapon. The Talberts, who were estranged, were the parents of seven children

Scale Makers Advised to Get Pre-Sale Tests

Manufacturers of weighing devices who are bringing new products into the District were advised yesterday by the D. C. Departments of Weights, Measures and Markets to bring their products in for a pre-sale inspection.

District Weights Inspector Ralph A. Montgomery said the practice would save trouble and expense if the new equipment were found faulty before it was installed.

In a summary of investigations by the department presented to the thirty-fourth National Conference on Weights and Measures at the Wardman Park Hotel, Montgomery said that 2900 condemnations for short measure were made in the fiscal year 1948.

These resulted in 35 arrests and fines totaling $4300, he said.

Opening the four-day conference yesterday morning, Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards announced that a completely new compilation of federal and state laws on weights and measures would be published next year.

Contest Winner Gets 49,000 Dollar Bills

Norwich, Conn., May 24 (U.P.).—Two men placed a heavy bundle on Mrs. Winona Thiel's desk today and said calmly, "Here is $49,000 in $1 bills."

Mrs. Thiel, 23-year-old secretary of Mayor Richard T. Marks of Norwich, stammered, "Oh, my gosh."

The men explained she had won the Colgate Palmolive Peet Co. radio contest. They delivered the money in an armored truck. She had it taken to a bank.

C & P Values Buildings at Rate Hearing

Baltimore, May 24 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. presented evidence today setting the value of its buildings in Maryland at $16,234,891 and its land at $1,345,000.

Testimony was introduced at the second day of a Public Service Commission hearing on the company's request for about six million dollars' worth of rate increases in Maryland.

The company is attempting to show that its facilities in the State are worth about 185 million or 190 million dollars. It contends it needs the rate increase to give it a reasonable return on its investment.

William B. Spencer, chief engineer for the Consolidated Engineering Co. of Baltimore, gave the evidence about the value of buildings.

The hearing is expected to continue for several weeks.

Closed Club Is Suspended By ABC Board

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday slapped a 10-day suspension on the operators of the night club in the Cairo Hotel.

But it won't be very effective, for the operators, Joshua Levin and Robert Goodman, had already decided to abandon the night club business, at least so far as the Cairo Hotel is concerned.

As the Cairo Caterers, Inc., Levin and Goodman operated the Salle de Champagne and the coffee shop at the Cairo Hotel. Recently, they surrendered their leases on the night club and coffee shop to the hotel.

The night club has been closed since May 17, but the coffee shop remains open under the hotel's operation.

The ABC Board found Levin and Goodman guilty of serving drinks to vice squad officers after legal closing hours, but innocent on two counts of permitting gambling on the premises. The 10-day suspension of the already closed night club was ordered to begin at 8 a. m. today.

The board also took under advisement charges that the proprietors of Carrigan's Restaurant, 2017 S st. nw., sold beer to an intoxicated man on March 9 and permitted him to remain on the premises. The operators, George and John Paleologos and Hilda M. Brunzos, have pleaded innocent to the charges.

3 Convicted of Spying Are Executed by Czechs

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 24 (AP).—Three men convicted last week of spying and treason were executed today, the government announced.

The men were retired Lieut. Col. Josef Hruska, Karel Bacilek and Boris Kovaricek. They were charged with forming illegal groups in February 1948, and of collecting weapons and passing information to "foreign agents in the Western Zone of Germany."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 24 (AP).—Grains generally carried a firm undertone at the Board of Trade today. Starting with advances of minor fractions wheat pushed upward to within three-quarters of a cent from the 2.00 mark, to reach its highest level since last February.

The advance was scored on some mill buying but the heaviest demand appeared to be from short accounts. Best prices were shaded at the close.

The finish found wheat up ⅜ to 1⅝, corn ¼ to ⅜ higher, oats ⅛ higher to ¼ lower, rye was 1½ higher, soybeans ⅜ to 1⅝ higher, and lard was unchanged to 5 cents a hundredweight higher.

Jobs Like Hope's Earn a Citation

By Richard L. Coe

NO PEOPLE LIKE SHOW PEOPLE—As Bus Ham has been telling you in the sports pages, the ever-generous show folk are going all out for the National Celebrities Golf Tournament . . . As a group, not just the group that will be here that first weekend in June but all who've contributed their services, they'll be honored with an Army citation to the Hollywood Coordinating Committee . . . This organization, headed for long by Edward Arnold, channels all requests for public services by Hollywood stars . . . Their generosity during the war was too apparent for further comment . . . But the way they keep it up for veterans' groups and civic enterprises is a stirring thing . . . Take Bob Hope's schedule . . . Bob will fly here from Hollywood to arrive in time for a noon tee-off Saturday . . . That night you can bet your bottom buck he'll look in on Arthur Godfrey's "Homecoming Show" at the Armory ('vyou got your seats yet?—You can buy 'em in the lobby of The Washington Post, 1337 E st.) . . . Sunday morning he'll be out at Walter Reed by 10 o'clock as one representative of his fellows on the Coordinating Committee . . . He'll be golfing with Crosby Sunday afternoon and at 6 o'clock Monday morning he'll be walking onto the Paramount lot in Hollywood to report to work for a new picture . . . Bob doesn't have to do this, nor do any of the other figures who'll be on tap that June 4 weekend . . . The sports figures come through when the need arises, but it always strikes me that it's the stage-screen-radio folk who always get asked first . . . It's a show world tradition, and if you think it's easy, just think about Hope's Friday-Monday schedule . . . Now, how would you like to be a movie star?

Making a last try, the minister asked if anyone in the crowd knew him and would like to say a few words. . . . Little guy in the back stepped forward and said: "No, I didn't know the deceased, either, but let me tell you a few words about California."

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN and Richard Rodgers yesterday gave the National Press Club a luncheon entertainment long to be remembered. . . . I wish you all could have been there. . . . Oscar turned out to be a super gag-master; he outshines any comic I've seen lately. . . . I'll spoil it, but here's one of his gags: In a little Western town a wandering pauper died, and it was decided to bury him with decent rites in the town cemetery. . . . Nobody knowing him, it was hard to find the right words to say over the grave. . . . ASCAP Prexy Fred E. Ahlert, who composed, among others, Bing's "When the Blue of the Night," had one of his ASCAP descriptive points neatly illustrated by Hammerstein. . . . Ahlert had pointed out how all musicians, long-hair, short-hair and no-hair, had benefitted by getting together and working together. . . . Jovial Hammerstein recalled a benefit some years ago in which all the great stars appeared. . . . All were topflight, but none felt they could approach Enrico Caruso, waiting his turn in the wings. . . . The great tenor waited alone . . . Until up to his side stepped Joe Frisco the comic . . . "Mr. Caruso," said Joe, "lay off the 'Strutters' Ball." I'm doing it in the second act." . . . That broke the ice.

DICK RODGERS and your reporter, I'm joyful to say, havt one thing in common: we both are nuts about "Oklahoma!" . . . Dick, who composed those wonderful songs, gave me the thrill of a lifetime by sitting down to the Press Club piano (NOT Mr. Truman's old upright) and playing some of its incomparable score . . . After Oscar had remarked that the war had not brought any outstanding songs, Dick disagreed—their only disagreement . . . He felt that their "Oklahoma!" typified the affection and pride we all have in our country far more effectively than any obvious, corny battle song could do, and I heartily agree . . . "Oklahoma!" opened while I was in Africa and in my first two weeks home I saw it four times, ignoring welcome invites to other shows for the sheer pleasure of the Rodgers-Hammerstein hit . . . So you see how thrilled I was to hear Rodgers play, "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning."

KYLE O'DONNELL and Earl Wrightson came down from Gotham with the Nation's top song-writing duo, and it's easy to see why they've captured television hearts . . . Kyle is a dream come to life, and that Wrightson (whose family, by the way, lives out in Maryland) has a splendid voice . . . They sang songs from "Oklahoma!" and "South Pacific" to the composer's accompaniment, winding up with "Some Enchanted Evening" that had the town's scribes humming in the elevators, a highly unusual event.

GOV. ROY J. TURNER, of Oklahome, also turns out to be a showman. . . . To hand comes a full section of the Tulsa Tribune, in color, with a Governor's Proclamation designating April 13 as "Tulsa Day" . . . Offices closed, stores all had window displays and that Tribune section boasted 32 pages (European sheets please copy) . . . All for a movie called "Tulsa," which will go into the Trans-Lux after Jennifer Jone's wraith fades.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, too, is a showman whose unique symbol, on all his books and now in his Playhouse movie, "Quartet," has prompted many queries . . . You see the symbol in the "Quartet" ad . . . Maugham's father, who served with the British foreign service, ran across it as an Evil Eye warder-off in Morocco and the writer adapted it for all his volumes . . . He's always had it on his glassware, too.

SO ENTHUSIASTIC is Spike Jones these days, that he's sending everyone telegrams announcing that Wife Singer Helen Greco has presented him with a 7 pound-12 ounce boy . . . "All three of us," winds up Spike, "are doing fine. Love and Kisses."

"AS TIME GOES BY," sings Dooley Wilson in the wartime hit, "Casablanca," now being reissued at the Metropolitan. Ingrid Bergman, Humphrey Bogart, Peter Lorre and Sydney Greenstreet are the other leads leaving the White House. House Speaker Sam Rayburn (Tex.), who left with him, agreed Congress might possibly finish by the end of July. Both said, however, that Congress will continue into August if necessary to complete action on "must" bills.

Lucas filled in more details on Senate programing after a conference of his Democratic Policy Committee.

The group voted unanimously to hold Senate sessions beginning July 1 in the miniature old Supreme Court chamber near the center of the Capitol. Both Houses have to vacate their regular quarters until next January to permit renovation and repairs to the ancient superstructure of the two chambers. House leaders are expected to select the commodious House Ways and Means Committee room when moving day comes.

Extension without restrictions of the Reciprocal Trade Act, first of the three Senate "musts" listed by Lucas, will be called up next Tuesday, the Senate leader indicated.

The Senate in the interim will try to pass legislation implementing the Armed Forces Unification Act, the central intelligence bill, a basing point compromise, and the District home rule bill, he said.

He was also pessimistic about a liberalized displaced persons bill clearing the Senate.

There have been recent indications that arms legislation, implementing the Atlantic Pact, will be allowed to wait until next season. Lucas declined comment on this.

He said the President is "definitely satisfied" with progress being made on his legislative program, adding: "We are going to have a pretty good record by the time Congress adjourns."

Lucas said sentiment for a July 31 getaway came from both sides of the aisle. Asked what the President thought of it, he said he did not expect any serious objection from the White House if major "must" bills are passed.

Lingering speculation on a fall special session continued, however.

After passage of the reciprocal trade bill, he said, either the Taft-Hartley repealer or the North Atlantic pact will have Senate priority. No decision was reached on which will come up first.

Lucas said there seemed no prospect of Senate action on health insurance this session and he "seriously doubted" civil rights legislation will be reached even though the House acts on some phase of the program.

Asked if the Senate may consider additional taxes or extension of the Social Security program, he said the House has authority to initiate both "and no bill has come over to us." The House Ways and Means Committee concluded hearings on Social Security a month ago, but has not yet reported a bill.

He said a simple bill raising the national minimum wage might pass the Senate quickly, but he indicated a bill broadening coverage under the wage-hour law might run into Senate delays.

Gonzaga Senior Wins $1000 for Essay on Selling

Walter J. Murphy, 19, of 1825 Parkside Drive nw., will receive first prize of $1000 for the best essay on "Selling As a Career" in a contest sponsored by the National Federation of Sales Executives. The award will be made tonight at the Chicago convention of the federation.

Murphy

He is a senior at Gonzaga High School and plans to attend the University of Notre Dame in the fall. His sponsor at Gonzaga, Lee P. Monahan, will receive a cash award of $100.

In addition to the $1000, Murphy has been given a television set by the Sales Executives Club of Washington. Two local runners-up also received prizes. They were: Jan Wilson of the Academy of the Holy Name, second prize of a $50 United States Saving Bond, and Morris MacGregor, of St. Paul's Academy, third prize of a $25 bond.

Brannan Would Keep Leaf Quotas

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan proposed yesterday to continue Federal marketing quotas on flue-cured tobacco beyond 1949. This type is used principally for cigarettes.

Quotas are designed to prevent production of unmarketable surpluses.

The proposal will be submitted to growers at a referendum to be held July 23.

Growers will vote on whether they favor continuance of quotas on the 1950 crop only, or for the 1950, 1951 and 1952 crops, or whether they oppose all quotas.

CTC Asks Bus Orders Review

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday asked the District Public Utilities Commission to reconsider orders directing continuance and extension of the C-2 bus line and expansion of the W-2 line.

The firm contended that patronage along the route of the C-2 line was insufficient to justify the extension and the present route is duplicated by others. The company said both orders would not provide the company "with a fair return on its investment in property used" to provide the service.

The W-2 line now operates between Shipley ter. and the terminal at 25th st. and Good Hope rd. se. The company petition objected to route duplication of W-2 and C-2 between Good Hope rd. and Naylor rd. and Barney Circle and from Naylor rd. to Pennsylvania and Alabama aves. se.

The petition declared, "The provision of duplicate service along portions of the crosstown route seems obviously an unwise duplication and one which will hinder and make more difficult the extension of radial routes into areas farther out."

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

I always enjoy shopping in town for the first hour or two. But I seldom look forward to walking home when my shopping bags are filled with parcels.

This afternoon I was on my way home, carrying a dozen bundles or more, when Cy Stubbs appeared. He'd been working in his garden on the other side of the street. But he stopped and came over to help me home with my packages.

Cy is a good neighbor—always ready to go out of his way to help "the other fellow." He's the same way on our telephone party line. He always answers his ring promptly and never interrupts when the line is being used. He'd give up the line in a second if someone needed it in an emergency. Like most folks on party lines, he knows that courtesy and consideration mean better telephone service for everyone.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE GENIUS OF Casey Stengel as a major league manager has not quite yet been established though he has his Yankees up there on top of the American League pennant race. Yankee pitching, plenty gooc and plenty deep, has been an immense factor. But there's another one. The Yanks own the man who could be called the best .282 hitter since A. Doubleday thought up the game.

When Tommy Henrich is in the batters' box, a pitcher never deludes himself about that lifetime .282 batting average. What he sees is a guy who is very apt to beat him out of a ball game, especially it it's close, because Henrich specializes in the important hits. When the Yankees had piled up their first 16 wins of the season, eight of them could be traced to hits by Henrich.

POVICH

It's not amazing that Henrich last season tied the major league record of four grand-slam home runs in a single year. It's when the bases are loaded that he's the most dangerous. The Yankees' front office recognized his talents last winter. To a guy who had failed to bat as much as .300 in six of his nine years with the club, they gave a $40,000 contract.

HENRICH HAS HIT eight homers this year. Five of them won ball games. Right now he's batting .320. If he slumps below .300 it will be no surprise. But he'll still be the most valuable non-.300 hitter in the league, and there are clubs who would be delighted to pay Henrich $40,000 if he hit no more than .275, because they'd know many an RBI would be packed into that figure and, also, that they'd have the best right fielder in the league.

Henrich's every movement on the ball field, whether he is standing up there with his bat cocked, or streaking around the bases, or holding a long drive to right field to a single, is the epitome of big league action. He was complimented on the grace and sureness of his play one day, and he had a ready answer:

"A lot of sweat goes into it, too," he said.

No ballplayer ever made more of a study of his art than Henrich. You ought to see him in spring training. He attacks that phase of the business on scientific lines. It's no accident that he plays ground balls to the outfield like an infielder. For a half hour every day in Florida, he actually plays the infield, to get accustomed to hard drives. "Rolling balls to the outfield look easy after that," he says.

THE NATS WERE watching the Yankees in batting practice at Yankee Stadium this season, and Coach Clyde Milan pointed to Henrich loping toward the outfield after taking his turn at bat.

"Look at him," said Milan, "he's the only outfielder in the league who goes out there after taking his raps. You'd think he was a rookie trying to make an impression, instead of a guy who has been around for 10 years. He's smart. He's getting a workout. He wants to warm up out there on balls hit off the bat, not on those fungo hits. He knows anybody can catch a fungo hit, and that a hit off a pitched ball is something else to handle."

At Wrigley Field, in Chicago, before the All-Star game in 1947, Henrich was making a minute study of the brick wall, tossing balls against it to learn how they caromed. He wasn't even going to be in the starting line-up, and the chances were that he'd see no action except as a pinch hitter, but he was overlooking no bets in case he did play.

THAT HENRICH wound up with the Yankees was the blunder of the Cleveland Indians back in 1937. They farmed him out to keep Outfielder Roy Weatherly on the club. It was a poor choice, and coincidentally they lost Henrich when the late Judge Landis discovered contract irregularities and declared him a free agent.

The Yankees spotted his talents when he performed for New Orleans in 1936. It didn't take much to divine them. He swatted a nice .346 and led the Southern Association in total bases. They offered him $25,000 to sign, and that fetched him. The Yanks moved him up to Newark, but only briefly. In seven games, they saw him bat .446, and grabbed him for the home office.

With the Yankees, Henrich's luck hasn't been all good, however. For most of his 10 years with the club, he's been performing in the shadow of Joe DiMaggio. Not until DiMaggio's sore heel hauled him out of the Yankee picture, did Henrich come into his own as the man the Yanks truly needed in there, every day.

Bosox Whip Tigers, 8-7; Doerr Stars

Boston, May 24 (AP).—After homering them into an early tie, Bobby Doerr lashed a two-run single with the bases loaded to give the Boston Red Sox a 10-inning 8-7 victory today to clean up a three-game series with the Detroit Tigers.

It was the surging Bosox' fourth straight win, their longest streak of the season, and the fifth straight setback for the Tigers, who lost two overtime games in their three starts here.

Ted Williams, who banged out his ninth homer and a pair of two-baggers, had Doerr's chance to shine but the slugger topped an easy roller to Lou Kretlow, third of the Detroit flingers, with two aboard and none out in the tenth.

Yanks Score 10 Runs In 5th, Rout Browns

New York, May 24 (AP).—Little Phil Rizzuto and stocky Yogi Berra supplied the punch that enabled the New York Yankees to trample the lowly St. Louis Browns, 13-3, today.

Rizzuto whaled a triple with the bases loaded and Yogi belted a three-run homer to highlight a 10-run, fifth-inning rally against Lefty Joe Ostrowski that sewed up the game. Errors by Gerry Priddy, Bob Dillinger and Jack Graham figured prominently in the uprising that turned the game into a cakewalk.

Di Maggio's Heel Sore Again; Four Other Yanks Hurt

New York, May 24 (U.P.).—New York Yankee outfielder Joe Di Maggio said today that his hour-long workout before last night's game had caused his injured right heel to hurt so much he can not resume practice for several days.

He felt fine after batting practice last night, but this morning the heel was sore. The discouraging report on Di Maggio's heel came at the same time that four other Yankee players suffered minor injuries in pregame practice today.

Pitcher Bob Porterfield suffered a bruised right throwing arm when he was struck by a batted ball. Catcher Connie Niarhos was hit on the shoulder with a bat, second baseman George Stirnweiss suffered a shin bruise when struck by a batted ball and Pitcher Fred Sanford turned his ankle fielding a ball.

In Chilly Northwest Wind

Lenczyk, Kirk Upset Victims In British Women's Golf

Harlech, Wales, May 24 (U.P.).—The United States' bid to win the British women's amateur golf championship for the third year in a row ended in failure today when Grace Lenczyk and Peggy Kirk were victims of major upsets.

Miss Lenczyk, the pretournament favorite from Newington, Conn., was eliminated in the third round by Jean Bisgood of London, 2 and 1, while Miss Kirk, of Findlay, Ohio, was ousted in the fourth round by Mrs. C. Falconer of Scotland, 4 and 3.

The hopes of Miss Lenczyk for a grand slam of the women's major golf titles—she holds the U. S. and Canadian amateur championships—ended on the seventeenth hole.

Dressed in corduroy slacks and wearing several woolen jumpers and mittens because of a chilly Northwest wind which swept the course, Miss Lenczyk staged a great comeback after a poor start but could not make up for her early mistakes.

Miss Bisgood, a 25-year-old London barrister, won the first two holes, halved the third when she missed a short putt, and took the fifth, sixth and seventh holes to lead her opponent 5 up at that point.

Miss Lenczyk won the eighth when Miss Bisgood put her tee shot in a bunker. The American really started going on the twelfth, but it was too late.

She won the twelfth with two fine wood shots, the thirteenth with a par four and after halving the fourteenth won the 435-yard fifteenth with a three, sinking a 7-yard putt after two more fine wood shots.

Now Miss Lenczyk was only 1 down, but she never did catch up. She lost the sixteenth when her approach was short and the end came on the next hole when Miss Bisgood, playing it safe, put her second shot on the green for a sure half. Without putting out, Miss Lenczyk went over to her opponent and shook her hand warmly.

Chipman, making his first start of the season, held the Giants to five hits. He lost his shutout in the ninth inning when Bob Thomson and Willard Marshall socked consecutive home runs.

Stranahans, Turnesa Win

Portmarnock, Ireland, May 24 (U.P.).—Defending Champion Frank Stranahan and Wee Willie Turnesa, favorites of the galleries and the bookmakers alike, fought off the wind, rain and a pair of stubborn British foes today as they led four other Americans into the third round of the British Amateur Golf Championship.

Stranahan, muscular son of a Toledo spark plug king who also won today, triumphed in a tussle of youth over age with a 4 and 2 victory over Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley, 56-year-old dog racing millionaire.

Turnesa, the deadly little iron master from Elmsford, N. Y., who won the British title in 1947 and the U. S. Amateur last year, downed plucky David Choyce, 30-year-old London surgeon, 4 and 3.

Turnesa and Stranahan soon were joined in the third round by Frankie's dad, Robert A. Stranahan; 63-year-old Ellis Knowles of Rye, N. Y., Big Bill Campbell of Huntington, W. Va., and Ed Lowery of San Francisco.

Six other United States entries weren't so fortunate. Pop Stranahan defeated Lieut. Willis Johnson of the Kelly Air Force Base in Texas, 1 up in 20 holes while Charles (Chick) Evans of Chicago, Leonard Martin of Rye, N. Y., Francis Ouimet, Elmer Ward and Frank Craven of Boston also were eliminated.

Lew Equals Record in PGA Tune-up

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., May 24.—Lew Worsham answered two pertinent questions today to the particular delight of his hometown friends in Washington, D. C.

First, Lew said that he definitely will play in the National Celebrities Tournament, June 4-5, at the Army-Navy Country Club, in Washington.

Then he went out and shot a record-equaling 63 as a reply to some persons who were asking: "What's happened to Lew Worsham's game since he won the National Open title?"

In his final tuneup for the PGA championship which starts tomorrow, the Washingtonian with the aggressive chin jetted around the Hermitage Country Club course in a brilliant 63.

Hotter than the 90-degree sun which baked both players and the course, Worsham went out in 34 and came home in 29 strokes to tie a record made in 1933 by Bobby Cruickshank.

Worsham's round was even more remarkable in that it included a pair of bogies on the outgoing nine. He three-putted the fourth and sixth greens, both from about 15 feet from the cup.

ONCE OVER those two holes, however, there was no stopping the Chin. His approaches were so accurate that he had 11 one-putt greens, none over 12 feet from the hole. His card showed 10 birdies, 6 pars and 2 bogies, both inexcusable.

It was easily Worsham's finest round of golf in years. "I just felt good," he commented while partaking of a quick lunch before hustling out to hit a few more practice shots.

Worsham's 63 is more substantial than Cruickshank's since Lew made his on a course which today goes 6667 yards, almost 400 yards longer than the course the Wee Scot scored his 63 on.

Surprise winner of the 1947 Open after a playoff with Sammy Snead, the sentimental and logical favorite to bag the thirty-first renewal of the pro golf championship, Worsham has done practically nothing since his success at St. Louis' Norwood Hills Club.

HE'S BEEN sticking close to his job at Oakmont Country Club, near Pittsburgh, forsaking the tournament trail. In the recent Augusta Masters, however, Worsham had 289, 7 strokes off the pace set by champion Snead. A week later, Worsham was a wretched seventeenth in the Specialists' Tournament at Virginia Beach.

But now, back on home soil—Lew was born 100 miles from here 31 years ago—the Chin seems to have regained his touch. The Hermitage course is made to order for him, a long-ball hitter. Officials have done everything possible to toughen the course, even reducing par from 73 to 71, but it still figures to be taken apart pretty regularly.

There were indications of that today. A rather obscure young pro from Houston, Tex., with a fine golfing name, Jackie Burke, jr., had a 64 playing with Gene Sarazen, who had 67.

Burke, handsome son of the golfer who trimmed Sarazen, 8 and 7, in the first round of the 1924 PGA, is considered a comer,

Nats Trade Candini for Oakland Pitcher

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

In what Clark Griffith called "a $75,000 deal," the Nats yesterday bought Pitcher Lloyd Hittle from the Oakland, Calif., club of the Pacific Coast League for fall delivery, or sooner.

The deal involved the immediate transfer of Pitcher Milo Candini to the Oakland club. All teams in both major leagues waived their claims to Candini.

Hittle, a sturdy 5-foot-10-inch left hander weighing 175 pounds, has won his last four starts for Oakland and was bought on the recommendation of Washington Scout Spencer Abbott. He is 24 years old.

Griffith is hopeful that he can persuade the Oakland team to release Hittle to the Nats despite their terms of fall delivery.

Want Agreement

A factor in the purchase of the pitcher, Griffith said, was Oakland's invitation for the Nats to establish a working agreement with that Triple A League club in the future.

One of Hittle's recent feats was a four-hitter against Seattle, though he lost that game, 1-0. Later in the same week he pitched and won a seven-hit game against the same club.

Despite the Nats' immediate need for pitchers, Griffith closed the deal for Hittle "to fortify ourselves for future seasons." He declared he is renewing his efforts to persuade President C. L. Laws of Oakland to deliver Hittle to the Nats this summer.

"I like the idea of a working agreement with Oakland," said Griffith. "We have no links with any Triple-A clubs, and it could be to our advantage. Perhaps if that deal is closed, Hittle will come to us earlier."

Griffith Urged

Griffith disclosed that he had sent Abbott to California two weeks ago "to scout up the best pitcher available." Abbott saw the Oakland left hander win four starts in a row and telephoned enthusiastic reports about him, beseeching Griffith to make the deal.

Despite Griffith's label of "a $75,000 deal," no more than $45,000 cash was reported to be involved, with the Washington club rating Candini as a $30,000 chattel. Candini, bothered this year successively by a wrenched knee and sore back muscles, pitched only 5 2/3 innings for the Nats this year. He allowed four hits.

Candini came to the Nats in January, 1943, from the Y

$8.40 Shot Scores by A Length

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., May 24.—Whipping with first his right hand and then his left hand, and riding desperately in between times Jockey Freddie Kratz brought Marvin and Moore's Sun Call home in front of the pack here today.

With as daring a saddle performance as seen by the writer in many a moon, Kratz won by a length margin over the favorite, McKenney and Hickman's Valley Poise. Eight lengths farther back came Mrs. M. M. Dunaway's Rogers Moose to be third in the field of seven competing in The Washington Purse.

See Race Results, Entries on Page 16.

With Valley Poise drawing the bulk of the wagering, Sun Call paid $8.40 and was clocked in 1:16 3/5 for the "Charles Town Course" of 120 feet more than six furlongs. It was the fastest time of the meeting.

Apprentice Willie Downs won three races. He brought J. K. Wynkoop's Chestwick home at $20.60, putting the finishing touches on a $187.40 daily double pay-off which began when Apprentice Bob Reigle won the first with Dr. H. Blandon's Bernie Moose, a $16.60 shot.

Downs won the third with Mrs. F. D. Christmas' La Vega, paying $11.80 and accounted for the day's finale with Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Honey Bun, a $4.80 favorite.

W-L Crew Lent $1000

Arlington's "Cinderella crew"—Washington-Lee High School's eight-man rowing crew — was given its chance to go to the national high school shell championship last night by the Arlington school board.

The board loaned $1000 to the Washington-Lee Athletic Association to allow the eight members to fly to the championship meet in Detroit, Mich., Friday and Saturday.

In asking the loan, Frank L. Ball jr., who represented the association, pointed out that the crew, first in Arlington history, was organized only recently and last week had won the Eastern championship in Philadelphia against far more experienced crews.

The $1000, repayable by November 1, was approved by three members of the board with O. Glenn Stahl and Colin MacPherson abstaining.

Bill Bennings . . .

AT CHARLES TOWN.

DEAR FOLKS:

This track has turned out several excellent jockeys and seems on the way to grooming another. Apprentice Jimmy Ulmer appears to be the most promising youngster on the grounds. He seems to have the knack of rating his mounts just long enough and then is a big help in the final drive. Jimmy has picked up finesse this spring and has big-time track ambitions. Art (WOL) Brown was a visitor and laughed when Walter Haight ran like a fugitive from a glue factory. I'm still waiting for the Art Brown, Walter Haight, Arch McDonald race that I predicted would materialize here at some date. The Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association will meet Thursday morning at 10:30 in Harris' paddock eatery.

MAN SWEARS
By Better Razor Blade

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 25—Plenty of men swear at their razor blades, but here's a man who swears by his!

When reporters called on Joe Muldoon, they found him whistling in the bathroom. "Boys," he said, "just tell my public I'm razor blade happy. After years of trial and error, mostly error, I finally found my blade—just a 'feather-touch' and so long whiskers! Why, shaving with Pal Hollow Ground is as easy as flicking the top off lemon meringue pie."

Mr. M forgot to say that Pal Hollow Ground still gives you 4 for 10¢ (or 10 for 25¢, 21 for 49¢, 44 for 98¢). He uses Double Edge. Single Edge cost the same.

Western's Evans Loses Heartbreaker

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

McKinley Tech and Eastern each scored a 3-1 victory yesterday as the Interhigh baseball double-elimination playoffs opened. Tech conquered Western at Western and Eastern subdued Wilson at Griffith Stadium.

At second round Thursday, Tech and Eastern, which have identical 9-1 league records, square off at Griffith Stadium. Western and Wilson fight it out, also on Thursday, at Western, with the loser facing elimination.

That licking yesterday was a tough one for Western lefthander Sam Evans to swallow, for he outpitched Tech's ace Jack Pope. However, Evans' mates committed four errors which gave Tech three unearned runs.

Loyalty Smear Plot Hinted in Removal Of Roy James

There are strong hints that the real scandal in the Roy James case is yet to be uncovered. It might be exposed if all of the facts were given in an answer to this question:

Was the employe loyalty program used in a below-the-belt fashion in an attempt to harass and blacken the names of James and several other employes and officials with whom he worked?

If it was—and there are suggestions to that effect—nothing could be more reprehensible. It would be a devilish plot to get employes fired on disloyal charges. That would be a piece of low-down and dirty business; a step toward thought control for Federal workers if it were successful.

James is reported to have been the victim of two extraordinary loyalty inquiries; first, as an Interior employe, and more recently as an Army civilian worker. A known anti-Communist, James was quickly cleared as he has been on previous occasions. But why the repeated loyalty checks? Why were loyalty charges made against people involved in his case?

Meantime, the Civil Service Commission says it's in the clear on the James case. It says it ordered James removed from his Army job because he didn't meet the minimum qualifications for it; that the protest of Representative Walter (D., Pa.) had no bearing whatever on its action.

A commission spokesman emphasized that James hadn't been fired and that it was up to the Army to reassign him to a job for which he could qualify. He said that James had less than two years of particular experience for the job he now holds while nine years' experience is required under commission rules.

The commission also revealed that Walter had protested a promotion James had received on his Interior job. It ignored the complaint and found James fully entitled to it.

A career employe, James resigned his Interior job last fall to try to beat Walter for his House seat. He was reinstated after his defeat.

NOTES: At the Naval Research Laboratory, Dr. L. T. Bourland and Warren M. Andrew are employe members of its efficiency rating board for graded employes. J. Willis Griffith and Maurice E. Claeys were elected to represent ungraded employes.

PAY STRATEGY: The Long subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee will resume hearings today on the Federal worker pay and reclassification bills. It will wind them up Friday with a round-table discussion of the entire problem.

Meantime, a dozen amendments have been drafted to the Administration's reclassification bill at the suggestion of subcommittee members. These amendments would:

1. Add about $100 to the proposed new classification schedule which would give the average classified employe an annual pay boost of $150;

2. Raise the salaries of administrative assistants to Senators from $10,330 to a maximum of $12,000, and an immediate raise to $11,500. To raise the clerical allowance for Senators, and to give other Capitol Hill employes a modest pay boost;

3. Simplify the efficiency rating structure to give individual agencies greater control over the system, and,

4. Knock out overlapping of salaries within the proposed new grades.

Among those who have been invited to participate in Friday's round-up session with the Long subcommittee are: Henry Hubbard of the Federal Personnel Council; Glen Stahl of Federal Security; Ray Ballinger of General Accounting; Robert Lachlin of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics; George Riley of the AFL; Ismar Baruch of Civil Service; William Sorenson of the Army, and Stanley Oliver of the AFL's Architects and Engineers.

Still Near Rockville, 5 Suspects Seized In Police Safari

1. DOWN THE DRAIN—A barrel of mash at the "white lightning" still near Rockville is dumped by Sergt. Carroll Miller, Det. Corp. Glenn E. Wood and Sergt. Melvin Wheeler. Corpl. Stanley Harding (sledge hammer in hand) waits to destroy the barrel

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

2. IT AIN'T GONNA RUN NO MO'—Sergt. Wheeler (extreme left) demonstrates how a flame-thrower was used to fire the kettles serving the still in Montgomery County woods. The "likker" was put up in glass jars, 109 of which were seized

A minor traffic violation led Montgomery County police early yesterday to seizure of a 50-gallon still 2 miles southeast of Rockville, Md. Six men, who allegedly catered at $5 a gallon to the "white lightning" connoisseurs of Washington, were arrested.

Pvt. Ward

The moonshine apparatus, which included two flame-throwers used as heating units, was uncovered in woodland hard by a small creek, one-half mile northeast of Aspen rd., near Viers Mill rd.

Seized in the raid were a truck loaded with 109 half-gallon jars of "likker," and headed for Washington, a 1949 automobile, 9 hogsheads of rye and corn mash, sugar, malt, yeast, and the following suspects, all charged with illegal possession of untaxed whisky:

Henry A. Pratt, 48, 1107 4th st. nw., also accused of driving in excess of 70 miles an hour; Wilbert Callaway, 34, 449 N st. nw.; George Fairley, 40, 5253 Ames st. ne.; George Burke, 43, 221 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Eddie Spearman, 31, 1336 11th st. nw.; and Henry S. Davis, 16, 517 N st. nw.

Pvts. Clyde Ward and David Bisset were cruising in a patrol car about 2 a. m. when they saw a truck veer recklessly from Aspen Hill rd. into Viers Mill rd.

"I got suspicious of that truck, decided to follow it," Ward reported.

Ward noticed the truck had a loosely swinging, muddy rear license plate, which is a Maryland violation, and halted the truck.

"The truck stops, the front doors fly open and two men pop out and off into the woods just as a speeding 1949 green Mercury roars up and jams on its brakes," Ward recalled.

The two men who fled from the truck jumped into the car.

Private Bisset meanwhile had nabbed one man still in the truck asleep. That was Callaway, police said.

Ward sped off alone in the police car in pursuit of the fleeing green car.

As Ward gained on the automobile in a 2-mile chase toward Rockville at 85 and 90 miles an hour, the suspect car suddenly ground to a stop.

"The doors flew open and maybe seven men scurried like scared rabbits into the woods," Ward stated. "I seized the driver, that was Pratt, just as he was trying to start again."

Four other county police cars responded to Ward's radio call and within two hours rounded up four suspects hiding near the road.

Tracing the truck tracks, police located the still. Several more alleged moonshiners were believed to be still at large.

Walkout Here By Carpenters Is Imminent

Metropolitan Washington is faced with an imminent strike of some 5000 AFL carpenters.

Strike day is being kept a secret by the union officials, but members of the Master Builders Association expect the walkout to ocur anytime between today and next Tuesday.

The walkout would paralyze most of the commercial and residential building operations in this area, including the new General Accounting Office, additions to the National Institute of Health, and downtown office buildings.

Randolph C. Wyant, secretary of the Master Builders Association, which represents 44 builders here, disclosed yesterday that the dispute involved a raise in pay demanded by the carpenters.

Originally, according to Wyant, the carpenters—who now get $2.40 an hour—asked for an increase of 22½ cents an hour, but later during the negotiations lowered their sights to an additional 10 cents an hour. However, when the new contract talks broke off two weeks ago, the carpenters withdrew their second offer and went back to their original raise demand, Wyant said.

The Master Builders, together with the Concrete Contractors Association, offered to renew the present contract, which ran out April 30, according to Wyant, and proposed elimination of the provision calling for one-hour notice before discharge of a carpenter from the job. This hour is supposed to be used by the carpenter to sharpen his tools for the next job, Wyant explained. The builders charge that, instead, the carpenters take the extra hour's pay as a bounty.

Outside of admitting that the union membership authorized the strike at a meeting Saturday night, officials of the AFL Carpenters Council here refused to comment.

"I never take my fights to the newspapers," said B. B. Blackburn, secretary-treasurer of the Carpenters District Council.

Standing Too Long Causes $10 Fines

Two street photographers were fined $10 each in Municipal Court yesterday for standing too long in the same spot.

The two men, Alexander H. Adams, 42, of 2032 Lee Highway, Arlington, and Edward Murphy, 41, 3333 5th st. se., were arrested in front of the Capitol Theater May 10 by Police Pvt. H. R. Cohea.

Pvt. Cohea said they were loitering in the vicinity for three hours and at one time stood in the same spot for 25 minutes. Under the law, a person is not permitted to stand in one spot on the street for more than five minutes.

Theft Case Dropped

Charges of stealing hub caps from Senator Chan Gurney's car, lodged against Richard Cooper, 23, of 601 I st. nw., yesterday were dismissed in Municipal Court when no prosecution witnesses appeared. Coper was arrested last Thursday near Gurney's home, 2407 15th st. nw. Assistant United States Attorney Raymond Baker said Gurney was going out of town and found it impossible to appear.

All a Mix-up

VFW to Sell Poppies In Pentagon

Pentagon Post No. 3839 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will sell "Buddy Poppies" as usual Thursday in its annual pre-Memorial Day sale, Luther J. Ross, post commander, announced yesterday.

What's more, the Pentagon Post has had permission to sell the poppies from Pentagon Headquarters Commandant Col. Malcolm D. Jones since April 11, Rose said.

Newspaper stories of a controversy over poppy-sale rights between the VFW and the American Legion all were due to a "misunderstanding" between the Pentagon Post and the District Department of the VFW, in which it falls, Ross explained.

The poppy committee of the District Department was refused permission for the sale April 1 and was told "another organization," identified as the Virginia American Legion, had been granted permission.

However, the committee never learned that the Pentagon had been granted permission for the sale April 11, without trouble.

Ward Caddington Renamed County Elections Head

Ward W. Caddington, 9404 Flower ave., Silver Spring, yesterday was reappointed chief clerk and supervisor of elections for Montgomery County. He was also named Democratic member of the Board of Permanent Registry.

Both appointments were made by the board of election supervisors which named William A. Volkman, jr., its president. Other board members are Delaney Brown and Willard A. King.

The board appointed Leonard Beall and reappointed Jack Kelly custodians of voting machines. Carey Quinn was renamed attorney for the board.

Bank Examiner Named

R. S. Beatty was appointed district chief national bank examiner at Richmond, Va., yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder. Beatty succeeds J. L. Bailey, who recently was named to a similar post at Philadelphia.

Opposition Delays Vote On Sales Tax

House sales tax opponents yesterday began a last-ditch attempt to block the 18-million-dollar District revenue bill.

Members on both sides of the sales tax fight predicted the move to block the 2 per cent sales tax would fail. But it delayed a final vote on the compromise revenue bill until Thursday.

House District Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) moved late yesterday that the House approve the bill as modified by a Joint House-Senate conference committee.

When McMillan called for the vote on the bill, Representative Kennedy (D., Mass.) who led earlier House fighting against the sales tax, called for a quorum.

At that point, Majority Leader McCormack (D., Mass.) put off the vote on the revenue bill until Thursday.

After House passage, the compromise bill must still clear the Senate before going to the White House.

House Upset By Mt. Vernon Profits Charge

House members tangled sharply yesterday over Mount Vernon and the parkway that leads there from Washington.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) urged passage of the bill. Congresswoman Frances Bolton (R., Ohio) opposed it.

During questioning, Committeee Member Compton I. White (D., Idaho) suddenly called for an investigation of Mount Vernon, historic home of Georg eWashington.

White made clear he did not like having everyone charged "four bits" a throw to see Mount Vernon. He said "We're commercializing the greatest patriotic shrine in America."

He said "some ladies ostensibly run it, but I'd like to know how many men are pocketing the profits."

Mrs. Bolton told White "I happen to be one of those ladies." She said she would be happy to have White "dig in" to the operation of Mount Vernon. She said all the income had gone to restoring the mansion to the condition it was in when George Washington lived there.

Hearings on the access road will resume at 9:30 a. m. today.

Protestant Women Give $3617 for Lepers

Washington Protestant Church women of 25 denominations yesterday turned in $3617 for leper missions.

The money makes a total of $16,037 that the women have raised since January, 1948, for lepers, it was reported at the semiannual meeting of the Washington City Auxiliary, American Mission to Lepers, at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Death Is Asked for Stableman In Carnal Knowledge Case

The Government yesterday in District Court asked the death penalty for a 41-year-old man charged with carnal knowledge of a 15-year-old expectant mother.

Facing the electric chair is Lancelot Russell, 1428 Rock Creek Ford rd. nw., a groom in the stables owned by his mother at that address.

A signed statement, in which Russell told of having sexual relations with the girl "once or twice a week" since the girl was only 14, highlighted the Government's case.

Girl Admits Intimacies

The girl herself, who rode regularly at the Russell stables, took the stand in tears and told of being intimate with Russell on many occasions since the summer of 1948.

Judge Edward A. Curran will submit the case to the jury of 10 men and 2 women this morning. Only the jury can prescribe the death penalty in carnal knowledge offenses. The Government was represented by Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin. William S. Thompson represented Russell.

The mother of the high school student, also in tears, told of taking the girl to a doctor in March and learning for the first time that she was pregnant. Returning to their home in Silver Spring, the girl told her mother the "whole story."

Three police officers, Sergts. Robert Weaver, Thomas Colby and James Sartain, who witnessed Russell's signature on his statement, also testified.

Dr. Milton F. Weingarten told of examining the girl in March and reported her then as "between 4½ and 5 months pregnant."

The defense objected to the introduction of the signed statement. The jury was dismissed and Russell himself took the stand briefly and said the officers threatened to keep him in the Sixth Precinct Station for four months until the parent of the child could be determined by blood test, unless he signed. The officers denied making this threat.

In his statement, the Negro groom said that the girl had asked for a chance to ride his horses in shows and had asked to be the only person allowed to ride them. "I told her that I had other girl friends who rode my horses and I could not let just her ride them unless she had something to do with me," his statement said. "By this I mean sexual intercourse."

He Says She Was Willing

At first the girl refused, Russell said, but later agreed. "So I took her along a bridle path in Rock Creek Park that they call Nature's Trail and when we got up near the old CCC camp, I took her off to the side and she willingly had sexual relations with me.

"After that I could be with her any time I wanted to," the statement continued.

Only one witness appeared for the defense, Russell's mother. She testified that Russell was "a little bit under par mentally" and had once been a patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Mother Says He Told Her

Under cross-examination, she admitted her son had told her he had committed the crime.

In his summation Heflin characterized the girl as "more interested in her riding than her reputation." He stressed the fact that the Government evidnce had not been contradicted.

In his summation, Thompson concentrated on asking the jury to ignore the Government's request for the death penalty.

"Life is the least you can give this man," he said.

7 Establishments Pay $50 Each in Food Violations

The operators of seven food-handling establishments in the District were fined or forfeited collateral in Municipal Court yesterday for health law violations.

In all seven establishments, health inspectors reported finding dirty floors and equipment, and food unfit for human consumption.

Fined $50 by Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn were Alexander Economon, owner of a restaurant at 1220 7th st. nw., and Joseph Lenoff, owner of a grocery at 1744 U st. nw.

The five other establishments, whose owners did not appear, each forfeited $50 collateral. The owners were listed as:

Howard G. Lee, delicatessen at 1541 5th st. nw.; A. S. Haddad, R. S. Haddad and W. E. White, food wholesalers at 1332 5th st. ne.; Sam Rosensky, restaurant at 2000 Georgia ave. nw.; Mary Winberg, grocery at 45 Defrees st. nw., and Irving Goldstein, restaurant at 100 North Carolina ave. se.

State Society Officers Reelect Chairman

Carl M. Walker, of Pierre, S. D., has been re-elected chairman of the Conference of State Society Officers of Washington, an organization coordinating the activities of the State groups.

Charles Leroy Haines, of Ellsworth, Me., secretary to Senator Brewster (R., Me.), was elected first vice chairman, and Clarence McCune of the Missouri State Society, second vice chairman.

Other officers chosen were Miss Albertina Amizich of the Illinois Society, secretary, and Miss Susan Burress, Mississippi Society, treasurer.

Traffic Hurts Cause Death Of Aged Man

D. C. traffic deaths to date, 1949 29
Deaths same period last year .. 32
Total traffic deaths, 1948 67

An 82-year-old man died yesterday of traffic injuries suffered May 14 while a 26-year-old woman was critically hurt last night when she was struck by a streetcar.

Frank A. Porterfield was fatally injured when struck by a taxi while crossing in the 1300 block of East Capitol st. on his way to his home at 1653 C st. ne. Police identified the cab driver as Russell Foster, 32, of 10106 Renfrew rd., Silver Spring.

Mrs. Marion E. Abner, said by police to live in the 1900 block of Calvert st. nw., was struck at about 8:30 p. m. as she was crossing the street in the 1800 block of Calvert st., in the rain, police said.

Mrs. Abner was taken to Garfield Hospital where it was said she suffered a possible skull fracture, possible broken neck, and a severe scalp laceration. Operator of the streetcar, police said, was Harry L. Stevens, 25, of 112 15th st. se.

Four persons, including a Georgetown professor and his wife, were injured early yesterday in a head-on collision on the Washington-Baltimore blvd. near Beltsville.

Dr. Stefan T. Possony, 36, political science teacher at the Georgetown Graduate School, who was driving one car and his wife, Vally, 41, were admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, Md., with broken legs. Their five-year-old daughter, Andrea, who was asleep on the back seat with her mother, was not injured, police said. The Possonys live at 402 E. Westmoreland rd., Falls Church, Va.

Police identified the driver of the other car as Willard Mullins, 23, of Jessups, Md. He was taken to Mount Alto Hospital with a broken knee cap and severe cuts. Riding with Mullins, police said, was Robert Knisley, 18, also of Jessups. He was admitted to Prince Georges General Hospital with a broken jaw severe cuts and a possible concussion.

Theresa McMahon Withdraws Suit To Break Will

Attorneys for Mrs. Theresa C. McMahon, 1241 Shepherd st. nw., yesterday withdrew a caveat involving the will of Richard J. McMahon, a butcher, who died last year.

McMahon left the bulk of his $100,000 estate to Mrs. Virginia Lee Williams McMahon, 4525 Nebraska av. nw., and in his will called her his wife "by valid marriage."

Mrs. Theresa McMahon asserted she never was divorced from McMahon although she filed suit for a Florida decree in 1941.

The caveat action, a preliminary step in will contests, was dropped, Attorney Nathan Rubey said, because a "settlement" had been reached. He declined to divulge the extent of the "settlement."

Enlargement of Park Board, Revamping, Sought in Bill

House District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), yesterday introduced a bill to enlarge and rename the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

McMillan introduced the measure at the request of the agency. It would enlarge the commission membership from 10 to 15, and rename it the National Capital Planning Commission.

The bill also would make the Federal government pay all the Commission's expenses, which now are carried in part by the District government. This idea has been opposed in the past by the District Commissioners, on the ground that it would do away with elements of budget control now exercised by the city government over the commission's activities.

Among the new members which the bill would add to the Commission would be a new representative of the District, selected by the Commissioners, a representative of Maryland, and one of Virginia. Each of the latter would be named by the Governor of his State.

Besides the three area representatives, the Architect of the Capitol and a representative of the Federal Works Administrator would be added to the commission. Dropped would be the representative of the Forest Service. The bill also calls for five Presidential appointees in place of the present four on the commission.

A. E. Demaray acting executive officer of the commission, said the bill was in line with recommendations of the Federal Budget Bureau based on a two-year study of commission operations.

Detective Denies Demanding $25,000 From Defendant

One of the men accused of stealing $60,000 from a retired policeman's safe hinted in District Court yesterday that a Robbery Squad detective had tried to shake him down for $25,000.

Louis H. Singleton, 40, of 910 Westminster st., said that Detective Sergt. Ernest R. Amos had demanded the money.

Amos, who previously testified as a Government witness, returned to the stand to deny the charge.

Also accused of the housebreaking and larceny from the home of Richard F. Beckley, 69, of 1800 New Jersey ave. nw., are Stance James, 29, of 1332 9th st. nw., and his brother Oliver, 24, of 1600 A st. se.

Both the Government and the defense completed their cases yesterday. Assistant United States Attorney Arthur McLaughlin started his summation before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut, but was interrupted when the case was continued until today.

Amos answered the Singleton charge by saying that Beckley had asked him to help retrieve part of the lost money. Amos also said the United States Attorney's office knew of his efforts to retrieve the money.

Escaped Rapist At Large the Day Miss Erickson Met Death Under Bridge

Jesse Paul Parker, convicted rapist captured here Sunday after seven years of liberty, is to be questioned about the unsolved 1944 slaying of Frances N. Erickson in Rock Creek Park.

Miss Erickson, 34-year-old architect, was fatally stabbed on the afternoon of August 6, 1944, on a rocky footpath under the Q st. bridge in Rock Creek Park.

She died in the arms of a park policeman after describing her assailant as a dark-skinned Negro.

In the four years and nine months that have followed, park and metropolitan police have questioned hundreds of men about the Erickson murder. Now, they intend to see if Parker has any knowledge of the crime.

Sergt. C. P. Apselbeck of the park police said a representative of the park police will be sent to the Baltimore penitentiary "as soon as possible" to question Parker.

And the metropolitan police intend to do likewise, according to Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty, head of the homicide squad.

Park police arrested Parker Sunday night on suspicion as he was walking in the rain in Rock Creek Park.

Investigation brought out that Parker, 35, had been serving a life term for assault with intent to rape in the Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Crownsville, Md., but had escaped with three other prisoners on October 17, 1941.

Capture of Parker brought out that somewhere there had been a slip-up in reporting and recording his escape. None of the police jurisdictions here nor the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been notified that Parker was "wanted."

Because of this oversight, Parker escaped detection as a fugitive lifer even though District police arrested him nine times on minor charges since August 5, 1942.

Even the hospital's records were apparently so confused about Parker's status that it didn't know the man was wanted.

Maryland State Police headquarters at Pikesville, Md., said the hospital when notified that Parker had been arrested replied that he was not wanted.

It wasn't until a check was made with the State penitentiary at Baltimore, that it became evident that Parker was a fugitive. State police, doubting that the man could have been paroled from a life term so soon, conferred with penitentiary officials.

State Police Informed

They learned that the penitentiary had transferred Parker to the mental institution, but had never been notified of his escape.

State police admitted, however, they had been informed of Parker's escape by the hospital in 1941 and that an Eastern Seaboard alarm had been put out by the Waterloo barracks.

Why weren't the FBI and other police jurisdictions notified of the escape by State police?

A State police official said this was not done because State police did not possess the man's photograph or a record of his fingerprints.

Hospital at Loss

So apparently the hospital at Crownsville did notify State police of Parker's escape, then lost track of him in the hospital records. State police put out a lookout and that was the end of their contribution.

How come the hospital didn't know Parker was wanted?

"I've been plagued with that question," Dr. A. H. Eichert, clinical director at Crownsville, said yesterday. "I can't say for sure because the records don't say, and there's no one here now who was here then.

"It has always been our custom to notify State police of an escape immediately. If a criminal patient escapes, we also notify the judge who tried the case and other officials involved."

Lightship Held Need At Peace Cross Fork

Wanted at Peace Cross traffic fork on U. S. 1 at Biadensburg: one lightship.

That was the observation yesterday of Walter W. Hubbard, editor of American Motorist, magazine of the American Automobile Association.

Hubbard said that unless something is done pretty soon about flood waters of the Anacostia surging to a depth of several feet over the crossing, "some wag is going to set up signs reading: "Cable Crossing, Don't Anchor" or "Reduce Speed to 10 Knots."

He also suggested that the Navy might be persuaded to lend amphibious craft to help cars caught in the flood water.

Organist's Technique Brilliant

By Paul Hume

Mario Salvador's technical skill was amply demonstrated in his organ recital last night in Washington Cathedral.

The St. Louis virtuoso played one of the longest recitals in history, much of it musically slight. Two of the large works of the organ repertoire kept company with a dozen other numbers of the last 50 years.

Because the organist was barely acquainted with the instrument at his command, because of the extreme length of the program and because so many works played were pretty empty, the evening seemed unrewarding.

Yet there were times when the genius of the performer shone through these drawbacks. His pedal technique, displayed in a Salve Regina by Manari, was hair-raising. The piece is worthless musically, but, like the Paganini studies for violin, showed what Salvador could do.

His open Bach Prelude and Fuge, the great pages in E Flat, known as St. Anne's, was wooden, if generally correct. His rhythm in the prelude was well disciplined, but vagaries crept into the fugue.

We are all in favor of more unfamiliar music in recitals.

But it should be of the finest quality, rather than from the sketchy volumes of organ music too often exploited by the wizards of the manuals and pedals.

Had Salvador known the riches of the cathedral organ more fully, he might have brought more of his recital to the fine level of the opening and closing pages of the Franck A Minor Chorale. The program was sponsored by the D. C. Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Elliston to Address High School Journalists

Herbert Elliston, editor of the Washington Post, will speak on "The Present Status of the Press" at a dinner for high school journalists at 6:30 p. m. Thursday at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Quill and Scroll, honorary high school journalism society, will induct 80 high school journalists at the dinner from Central, Coolidge, Eastern, McKinley Tech, Western and Wilson High Schools.

Five Youths Held

Alexandria police yesterday turned over to juvenile authorities five teen-age boys who, police said, admitted breaking into a store and stealing merchandise from beer to blankets.

Two officers in a police cruiser saw two of the youths lugging a case of beer along a street at 3:15 a. m.

The five, police said, admitted getting the merchandise at the Gateway Market, 701 S. Patrick st. They hid the loot, police said, in a barn.

Loot recovered, police said, included 5 cases of beer, 4 bottles of wine, 11 cartons of cigarettes, candy, chewing tobacco, hotdogs, bread, blankets, a hammer, 26-inch butcher knife, and some small change.

No Place Like the Home

Senate District Committee Chairman McGrath (D., R. I.) yesterday introduced a bill to admit paid patients to the District Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains. They would be admitted at rates and under regulations fixed by the District Board of Public Welfare. Paid admissions would not interfere with admission of indigent patients.

Cops of Many Colors

District Commissioner yesterday decided special policemen may wear any color uniforms they desire provided they wear a shoulder patch with the lettering "special policeman."

The corporation counsel's office was directed to prepare an amendment to regulations to this effect. The issue was raised after several special officers objected to an order by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett setting the color and cloth of the uniforms.

Five Years for an Eye

An Alexandria man was given a five-year prison sentence yesterday in Alexandria Corporation Court for an assault on a one-eyed woman that left her completely blind. Janie Walker, 52, of 425 S. Columbus st., Alexandria, said John Hollis, 41, of the same address, struck her in the eye April 6.

Welsh Against Cash-Payoff Slot Machines

Prince Georges County Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh yesterday announced his opposition to legalizing cash-payoff slot machines.

The county will vote on legalizing the payoffs at a referendum June 2.

Suit to block the referendum was withdrawn without prejudice yesterday by C. Walter Hendrix of Silver Spring, a pinball-machine operator, who contends the slot-machine legislation, if approved, would bar his firm.

Commissioner Welsh's comment on slot machines came during a hearing on the county school budget. Several citizens who attended the meeting expressed opposition to legalizing the slot machines.

Welsh said he, too, was opposed to the machines and urged the voters "to go out and beat them at the polls." Previously, the Hyattsville Ministerial Association with help from various civic groups had been leading a fight for a "no" vote at the referendum.

Fay's Wife Is Left A Third Share in Mother's Estate

Mrs. George Morris Fay, wife of the United States Attorney for the District, is among three children of Mrs. William H. Donovan slated to share equally in the $125,000 estate left by Mrs. Donovan who died May 10.

A petition for letters of administration filed in District Court yesterday by William H. Donovan, a son, disclosed that his mother had died intestate automatically making her three children, Mrs. Fay, Mrs. Henrietta M. Noonan, and himself, automatically equal heirs.

Mrs. Donovan's husband, William H., former assistant general counsel for the Riggs National Bank, died January 14. He left his wife virtually his entire estate consisting of their home at 3714 Harrison st. nw., valued at $25,000, and stocks and bonds worth $75,000. The three children were left $3000 each under his will.

Lee Phone Calls 15,000 in Day

Camp Lee, Va., May 24 (AP).—More than 15,000 telephone calls were handled today in the intense "play" of the command post exercise here, largest in U. S. Army history.

Communications is only one of the logistical factors in the new type support organization being tested during "Exercise Log Lee" this week.

Setting up message centers for the "paper" maneuver necessitated the installation of 338 telephones operating from ten switchboards and the laying of more than 75,000 feet of wire and cable.

Four-year-old Roy E. Smith, jr., of 4414 3d st. nw., will receive the Air Medal Thursday which was awarded posthumously to his father, Lieut. Roy E. Smith, sr., B-25 pilot killed late in World War II.

The boy, who was born 55 days after his father and the bomber crew died on a mission over Fabrica, Jap airdrome on Negros Island in the Philippine area, will receive the decoration in ceremonies at 5 p. m. at Bolling Air Force Base.

Lieutenant Smith was a graduate of McKinley High School, and studied at George Washington University. He worked at the Bureau of Engraving before enlisting in the Air Force in 1942.

The Air Medal citation states that "the technical skills, exceptional courage and selfless devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Smith as pilot contributed to the success of bombardment operations and reflect credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States."

Present at the ceremonies, in which 3000 airmen and officers will take part, will be Roy, jr.'s mother, the former Audrey Murphy 4414 3d st. nw.; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. George Smith, is with the airlift in Germany.

AFL Group Renominates All Incumbents

Baltimore, May 24 (AP).—President Harry Cohen and all other incumbent officers of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor were renominated unanimously today at the AFL group's forty-third annual convention.

The six vice presidents who will serve another term are Carl G. Schlotz, Baltimore; Charles B. McCloskey, Washington; E. W. Butler, Hagerstown; Glen A. Snyder, Baltimore; C. E. Stutzman, Cumberland, and C. F. Preller, Washington.

Frank J. Coleman of Washington was renominated for secretary, and Robert Lester, also of Washington, will serve another term as treasurer.

Jefferson Davis, of Baltimore, was named to fill a seventh vice presidency, a post created last year. F. Clarke Ellis, president of the Building Trades Council of Baltimore, was nominated to fill a vacancy in the post of national organizer.

A resolution criticizing the American Medical Association for its opposition to President Truman's national health program was recommitted to the resolutions committee after a long debate.

The four-day convention will be climaxed tomorrow night with a speech by William Green, national AFL president.

Group Favors Non-Partisan County Poll

Sixteen persons voiced their approval election of Montgomery County councilmen last night at a hearing held by the county council.

No one appeared in opposition to a proposed bill now before the council. The measure, it was pointed out, would conflict with Maryland's Lindsay law, enacted in 1945 and calling for council elections by the same party methods used to elect the General Assembly.

State Senator Roy Tasco Davis denounced the Lindsay measure as a tool of county politicians to prevent counties from electing their own councilmen by their own methods.

Allen H. Gardner, former president of the Montgomery County Charter Committee, said the proposed measure would make it easier for Federal employes, who comprise 35 to 40 per cent of the county's voters, to get Civil Service Commission permission to take part in county politics.

The measure, which was introduced by all seven councilmen, will probably be passed either Saturday or Monday. Its proponents hope to get a court ruling on the measure in the light of the conflicting State law.

Civic Unit Opposes Off-Sale License

The Deanwood Civic Association last night asked the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to refuse a liquor license application for an off-sale store at 1013 Kenilworth ave. ne.

Willet J. Marcus, president of the association, said the group opposed the store because it was near a church in the area and that the group felt there were already too many liquor stores in the vicinity.

Members of the association that met in the Carver School, Whittinghom and Lane pls. ne., also petitioned the District commissioners to change the name of Sheriff rd. ne. to Broadus blvd.

Show Honors Won By Mrs. Marshall With Rose Display

Mrs. Alma Marshall of 1328 Allison st. ne., garnered 33 points with her display of roses to win the rose sweepstakes in the Woodridge Garden Club's twenty-second annual Rose and Spring Show held last night at the Sherwood Presbyterian Church hall, 22d st. and Rhode Island ave. ne.

An Eclipse rose entered by Mrs. H. C. Maynor, 2605 Brentwood rd. ne., was judged the best rose in the show. H. J. Clay, 2603 Monroe st. ne., had the best peony, a Lady Alexandra Duff.

An arrangement of flowers in which roses predominated, presented by Mrs. Joe Bailey, 2231 N. Columbus st., Arlington, was tops in arrangements.

Other winners were Nancy Clark, 1721 Otis pl., ne., best arrangement by children under 12; Janice Buckingham, 2123 Kearney st. ne., best arrangement by children over 12; H. J. Clay, best arrangement by men; Mrs. George Clark, 1721 Otis pl. ne., arrangement sweepstakes.

Alexandria's City Council May Enter Phone Inquiry

The Alexandria City Council last night indicated it may change its mind and join with a committee of the League of Virginia Municipalities in investigating a requested telephone rate increase.

Last month the Council turned down an invitation to join in the proposed survey of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.'s request.

Reasons given were that the city did not have the $1000 necessary and that the State Corporation Commission would render a just decision without outside assistance.

Hearing Set for June 13

City Manager Robert S. Marshall, jr., reported last night, however, that the rates committee of the league has definitely decided to proceed with the survey and that the State Corporation Commission has indicated it would welcome such additional information at the public hearing June 13. He urged Alexandria to take part.

The council asked Marshall to learn if Alexandria's share of the expense could be reduced after Councilman Marshall J. Beverley had said he thought it is the city's duty to join in the investigation.

Other Actions by Council

In other actions the Council:

1. Referred to its finance committee for disposition a list of bills—some nine years old—totaling $50,000 owed to the city by citizens.

2. Appointed a committee to discuss possible reorganization of the city's board of health with the Alexandria Health Council. The Health Council has urged that membership of the board, which now consists largely of city officials, be made more representative of the community.

D. C. Heads Favor Bill for Requiring Cancer Reports

Drafting of legislation to make reporting of cancer and all malignant neoplastic diseases mandatory in the District was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The step was taken at the request of Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, who said such diseases were the second highest cause of death.

The bill would make such reports to the health officer obligatory by doctors and hospital officials within 10 days after discovery. Violators would be subject to fines of $10 to $100 for each offense.

Among diseases the bill would make subject to the report were cancer, sarcoma, lymphoma, leukemia and any other malignant growth, Dr. Ruhland said.

Uncle Hunted Here In Rape of 2 Girls

A 34-year-old man was sought last night by Anne Arundel County police on a charge of raping his two small nieces, sisters whose ages are 2 and 3 years.

An eight-State alarm was sent out for the arrest of Willard Gray of Quicksburg, Va. District police were notified that Gray might head for Washington because his sister lives here.

Gray is alleged to have brutally raped the children in a cabin near Pasadena, Md., Monday night while he was serving as baby-sitter. The parents had gone to Glen Burnie, Md., about four miles distant, to do some shopping.

Warrants charging Gray with two counts of rape were issued at 7 o'clock last night. The double rape was not reported to police until yesterday morning, after which the children, badly injured, were rushed to Mercy Hospital in Baltimore.

At the hospital, the younger girl was reported in "poor" condition and her sister in "fair" condition.

The father of the girls is a handyman and laborer who moved his family into the cabin about five months ago after they moved to Maryland from Quicksburg, Va.

His brother, police were told, had often "sat" with the children when the family lived in Virginia. The brother had come up from Quicksburg last Sunday.

She and her husband left the cabin at about 9:50 p. m. Monday to go into Glen Burnie to do some shopping. They left the brother to watch the children.

En route home, the father stopped off at a tavern. The mother arrived at the cabin alone at 10:20 p. m. She found both girls bleeding profusely and questioned the brother.

He told her that he had suffered a nose bleed and that probably some of the blood had dropped on the children. She asked him to go to the tavern and tell her husband to return home.

The brother went to the tavern, stuck his head inside the door, told the father, "Your wife wants you," and then disappeared. He has not been seen since.

Police were alerted when a tavern owner called the county police substation on Mountain rd. yesterday morning and asked that a doctor be sent to the scene.

When pressed for details, the tavern owner said he was told two young girls had been raped in a cabin behind his tavern. The scene is only a quarter of a mile from the police substation.

Sergt. W. L. Brown and Pvt. James G. Jacobs of the county police went to investigate. They found the mother standing outside the cabin with the 2-year-old girl in her arms. The older child was inside the cabin on a bed.

Dr. Gustav Faubert of Glen Burnie was rushed to the cabin in a police scout car. He found the children seriously injured and ordered them taken to the hospital in Baltimore.

In their eight-State alarm, police described the uncle sought for questioning as 5 feet 8 inches, about 145 pounds, with light hair combed straight back, a ruddy complexion and red inflamed eyes.

Senator Hits Building Plan

Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) called on the Senate yesterday to cancel plans for its proposed new office building.

He said canceling it would save about 22 million dollars now in the cost of the new building, and also would save the taxpayers future upkeep costs of about 1.1 million a year.

In his speech to the Senate, Ellender also protested the ousting of families from the site of the new building, on 1st st. ne. between B and C sts.

He was warmly supported by Senators Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), and George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), and A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.

Byrd said that if present senatorial office space were used with proper economy there would be ample room. Ellender said that if present available rooms were equally divided, there would be four for each Senator and six left over.

Ellender said the building was a "patent luxury" costing more persons who would use it.

Irate County Mothers Storm Office on School Funds Cut

More than 80 irate Prince Georges County citizens—mostly mothers—yesterday stormed their county commissioners with angry pleas that cuts in the school budget be restored.

After a formal hearing with the commissioners, a spokesman for the citizens, Mrs. Howard Ross of Brookside Manor, announced that plans are under way to "get new commissioners who understand the needs of the school, in the 1950 elections."

The commissioners, belabored by mothers, many of whom had brought children in their arms, later publicly announced they were "greatly distressed by the amount of misinformation" on the school budget.

Cut $163,000, They Say

In a formal statement, they pointed out that they are discussing the school operating budget, and that they voted $336,000 more for schools this year than last. They said they had cut board of education estimates by only $163,000.

The commissioners, who said bonds would be needed for school construction, stated, "The commissioners are keenly aware of the emergency situation in the schools and are exerting every effort to meet this situation.

"The law will not permit the commissioners to change the current levy, which was signed prior to May 1 as required by law. At least half of the county tax bills have been prepared, with the current tax rate being used."

Protestants at the meeting urged general school improvements and restoration of a reported $330,000 cut in school operating funds.

Bond Issue Awarded

School Superintendent G. Gardner Shugart said the school budget is $343,000 less than the amount requested, partly owing to reduction in State equalization fund contributions.

Meanwhile, the board of education announced award of the $650,000 school bond issue for which bids were opened yesterday to Alex Brown & Sons and Blyth & Co. of Baltimore, offering a 2.387 interest rate.

The issue will finance construction of 20 emergency classroom buildings, additions at three schools and purchase of two Greenbelt school buildings.

Montgomery Council Votes Public Safety Department

Four bills, one of which establishes a department of public safety, were passed yesterday by Montgomery County Council.

The new department will be headed by County Manager I. G. McNayr as safety director. Under him will be the police division, handled by Police Chief Charles M. Orme, and a division of fire protection, with a fire marshal earning $4800 a year, yet unnamed.

Advising the new department will be a county fire board, composed of one delegate from each fire department, and a safety board, made up of non-salaried safety experts who are county residents.

Chief Orme's duties remain unchanged under the bill. The principal function of the proposed fire marshal will be administration of fire prevention laws and the proposed fire code.

Volunteer fire departments have expressed the fear that the fire marshal might interfere with their autonomy, but officials have assured them this will not be the case.

Other bills passed yesterday would establish a Rockville fire area, and enlarge the Cabin John Park fire area. A fourth bill would enable the county manager to accept new streets in private subdivisions on behalf of the county government.

The council took under advisement a request from the county liquor control board for clarification of its status on the question of whether it should be a profit-seeking agency or a body to control the sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages.

Net profits during the coming year were estimated by liquor board officials at $350,000.

Inquest Holds Crapshooter

William D. Miree, 23, was ordered held for grand jury action at an inquest yesterday into the fatal shooting of Edward White, 45, of 1525 Q st. nw.

According to police, White was shot fatally Monday, at 6th and N sts. nw., as the result of an argument that started during a crap game.

Miree told police White became angry because he would not lend him $2. White later returned to the scene with a shotgun and ice-pick and Miree shot him with a .38 caliber revolver, police said.

George Meade, who said he owns a hotel at 2214-2230 F st. nw. told The Washington Post yesterday that Miree is not living at 2226 F st., the address he gave police when arrested.

Sullivan 'Piped Ashore', Leaves U. S. Service

John L. Sullivan formally retired from Government service yesterday.

Francis P. Matthews of Omaha, will be sworn in today to succeed him as secretary of the Navy.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson was among those who lined up at the door of the Pentagon building to bid Sullivan farewell.

An honor guard of sailors and Marines fired a 19-round farewell salute, and Sullivan was "piped ashore."

Man Cleared In Rape Case

A Prince Georges County Circuit Court jury early today acquitted a 29-year-old Rogers Heights, Md., carpenter of charges of raping and committing indecent acts on a Baltimore waitress.

The jury received the case at 10:30 p. m. It returned the acquittal at 12:40 a. m.

The defendant, Shelby W. Colbert, was accused of raping the waitress on the Lanham Speedway after he had promised to take her from Washington to Baltimore.

During the testimony the waitress said she had been on a blind date at a tavern in Colmar Manor, Md., and that her date had knocked her down when she refused to accompany him to an after-hours club.

She said Colbert was at the tavern and offered to drive her to a bus station in Washington. Later he agreed to take her to Baltimore and stopped on the speedway where the attack is alleged to have occurred.

She told the jurors Colbert pulled her from the car and forced her to submit.

She ran when he released her, she said and hid in a ditch. A truck driver picked her up later and took her to a filling station where she called police.

Colbert denied having sexual relations with the woman. He said that when they stopped on the speedway she got out of the car voluntarily and disappeared into the bushes. When she failed to return, he left, he said. He said he thought she had become lost.

Salesman Held For Indecent Talk on Phone

A 26-year-old shoe salesman yesterday was charged in Arlington County with "using vulgar and indecent language over a telephone." He was said to be the first ever charged with such an offense in the county.

The accused, John T. Lacy, 2804 S. 8th st., Arlington, was released under $500 bond for a hearing June 1 in Arlington County Court.

Police said they had received a complaint from Mrs. Ruth Skinker, 43, of 1846 Vernon st. nw., that a man for some time had been phoning her with indecent proposals at the Arlington apartment where she works as a maid.

She was told to make a date to meet the man the next time he called. The date was set for 4 p. m. Monday on a street corner near her place of work.

At the appointed time, police said, Lacy showed up and was arrested by Detective George Coppage and Pvts. Gilbert Stream and Lester Hager.

Confederate Memorial Day Honored

Alexandria celebrated its Confederate Memorial Day yesterday, with the usual ceremony of laying flowers on the Mound in Christ Church Burial Ground, where lie the remains of 280 Confederate veterans.

The ceremony sponsored by Alexandria chapters of the Sons and Daughters of Confederate Veterans, was preceded by a service in Christ Church Parish Hall.

Confederate Memorial Day is a local observance. Alexandria celebrates on May 24, because it was on that day in 1861 that its first contingent of troops marched off to war.

Hadassah BPW Hears Report On Israel by Mrs. Daniel Miller

Westernization of Israel will help to westernize the entire Middle East. And the high standards of living sought by the Israeli will help to raise the standards for all, Mrs. Daniel B. Miller told members of the Business and Professional Division of Hadassah in a speech last night at the Jewish Community Center.

The speaker returned about two months ago from a tour of Israel, Cyprus, Aden and embarkation points in Europe for Jewish immigrants to Israel. While in Israel she did a stint as reporter on the Palestine Journal. When fighting quieted down she surveyed Hadassah projects throughout the new state.

Mrs. Miller said that the people of that nation want and need peace for normal living. "The population is taxing itself and has gone on an austerity program in order to aid the new immigrants, who are coming in at the rate of 1000 daily, she explained.

Mrs. Miller said that since 1937 Hadassah's Medical Association has provided health services, equivalent to the high American standard, to all peoples of Palestine.

"There's great hope that the hospital on Mount Scopus, just outside Jerusalem which has been closed for more than a year, soon will be reopened under terms of the Trans-Jordan armistice," she explained.

She pointed out that a new medical school to train future hospital staffs was opened last week in Bevingrad, a former old English military hospital, which is located in the business section of Jerusalem.

In addition, she said that a new hospital is being opened in Negev in the old Biblical city of Beersheba, which will service the entire area.

TO cut or not to cut the cake was seriously debated at the Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal luncheon yesterday. Taking a hand in the debate are (left to right), Mme. Eliahu Elath, wife of the ambassador from Israel; Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Garfield Kass and Miss Valerie Stone. Did they cut the cake? No, they decided to give it to Friendship House

UJA $136,000 Nearer Goal After Women's Luncheon

By Nicha Soure

The Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal was $136,000 closer to its $300,000 goal yesterday after a $100-minimum-gift luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

Approximately 700 women attended the luncheon of the UJA, whose aim is to empty the Displaced Persons camps in Europe this year.

Honor guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Eliahu Elath, wife of the first Israeli Ambassador to the United States; Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, wife of the Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. A. A. Ribicoff, wife of the Connecticut Representative.

Life in Israel

Miss Valerie Stone, who made the trip from Marseille, France, to Haifa with the Jewish displaced persons, gave descriptive vignettes from the Israeli life.

The trip was made, she said, on what 50 years ago would have been a yacht. It would have accommodated 50 persons comfortably, she continued, but on this trip there were 560 persons. "But the Mayflower was no luxury liner either," she added.

There was a little boy on the trip with whom Miss Stone tried to strike up an aquaintance. After Miss Stone tried all the languages she knew, the boy responded to a Yiddish question. "I want to forget Yiddish and Polish," he told her. "I want to learn Hebrew in Israel."

"But how can I talk to you now and how can we be friends if you wait until you know Hebrew?" Miss Stone asked. "Maybe you can learn Hebrew in Israel too. Then we can be friends," he answered. Miss Stone found the same hopes and expectations as the little boy showed in all the persons going to Israel.

Miss Stone told of a 17-year-old girl who on boarding the ship sang "The Hatikvah," the Israeli national anthem, and "The Marseillaise." The first she sang in anticipation of her new country and the second in thanksgiving to French territory of Algiers, where she had found a haven from Arab patrols.

Then there was a 7-year-old girl whom Miss Stone called "the most self-reliant human being I have ever seen." She boarded the ship and left the ship alone and played alone during the eight-day trip humming a little tune all the while.

Miss Stone, who is Mrs. Stefan Heym in private life, lived while in Israel in a "kibbutz," a rural settlement. She stayed in a one-room unit with a water tap in front. In spite of the fact that some persons had to walk as many as five blocks to a lavatory to wash up, all came to dinner clean wearing clean clothes. There was a trench squaring off the "kibbutz," reminding the people there that not too far in the past Israeli men and women had to fight the Arabs for that tract of land, she said.

To Aid D. P.'s

Representative A. A. Ribicoff of Connecticut termed the UJA the "private Marshall Plan" to Israel. "We must make sure that displaced persons leave the camps of Europe and go to Israel where they are welcome."

At the speaker's table was a three-tiered cake, symbolic of the United States and Israel, which was given to Friendship House after the luncheon. The top tier, in red, white and blue, represented the United States; the second tier commemorated the first anniversary of Israel's attendance at the United Nations last week; and the bottom tier, in royal blue and white, depicted the Star of David and Israel.

Mrs. Elath told the women that she will find it hard to tell the Israeli women when she returns to Israel next week "of the zeal, energy and devotion that American women have given to the UJA." Mrs. Elath will return to the United States in the fall.

Buying Towels Requires Care

The new bride should take extra care in the purchase of towels, because these articles must survive more strenuous, and more consistent wear than any others in the linen closet.

When buying towels, hold them up to your eyes. If tiny, regular pinpoints of light show through, the weave is tight and good. Weak, open spots are the dead giveaway of a poorly woven towel.

Buy towels in a wide variety of sizes: large ones for the man in the family, middle-sized ones for your own bath, and hand towels for minor clean-up operations. Because of pound rates at the laundry, it is smart to use small towels whenever you can. Large towels are more costly to send out, and harder to launder at home.

To distinguish once and for all between towels, buy them in harmonizing shades.

Woman Wonders Why She Can't Thaw Out to Formerly Neglectful Family, Who Backslap Her Since She Polished Talent, Won Fame

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: All my life I have loved people for what they were and what they did, day by day. They didn't have to be famous or do some piece of showmanship to win me.

Honesty, kindness, a disposition to share work and play, were qualities I appreciated above all else when I found them in others' lives. Race, faith, wealth or poverty were incidental.

When I realized some years ago that my husband and children, growing older, had less and less time and thought for me, I undertook to develop a talent, rather than feel lonely and put-aside. I felt that I had failed somehow as a wife and mother, since they seemed to care so little about sharing life with me.

She Feels Stranger to Husband, Progeny

NOW I've become rather famous through no designs of my own, and now my family wants to be photographed with me, to go places I am invited; and it's "Mom, that's great" or "I certainly am proud of this wife of mine." Yet I am no sweeter, no better today, than I was when they passed me by.

My husband was a person who "got and forgot." And as the children grew up they were much amused by my standards for showing gratitude and reciprocal courtesy—not just to me, but to everyone. Now I feel strangers with my husband and children; the former warmth and tenderness is gone and my heart feels empty; and I do not care for laudatory publicity. What is wrong with me? T. Y.

She Is Frozen by Resentment

DEAR T. Y.: The general appearance of your letter, written in lead pencil on poor-quality paper, is hardly in keeping with your supposedly rather famous, publicized and socially sought-after status today.

Thus I wonder just what talents you've proved or what success you may have; or whether you are posing for discussion a "day dream" situation that sometimes occurs to you—in which you fancy yourself famous "on your own" and getting even with a neglectful family, by being coldly indifferent to their belated appreciation of your worth.

Or maybe you took a prize in baking, canning or needlework in a local exhibition, and had an hour of glory that turned your head. In any case, your emotionally "empty" attitude towards family is real enough, and it amounts to giving a new twist to long-standing feelings of resentment.

Neurotic Drift Away From Life

IN ALL probability you had a parasitical tendency to "devour" husband and children; that is, to absorb all their time, thought and affections, and dominate them sentimentally. And when they fought this "mom"-tendency, striving to maintain some God-given inner freedom of spirit, you felt "put aside,"—wronged, rejected and frustrated in your drive for love-security.

You say you felt that you had somehow failed as a wife and mother; but there was no humility in your conclusion. Rather you felt stung by the family's supposed "ingratitude," so you hardened your heart against them, and whether or not you've achieved worldly success, at least you crave that alternative ego—compensation.

At present you are in a neurotic drift of psychological withdrawal from any type of intimacy, which is a drift towards death,—and to bring you out of it I prescribe immediate reading of Agnes Sanford's ebullient humorous book "The Healing Light," (Macalaster Park Publishers),—a dynamic textbook on how to love, and the profit that is in it.

Use Protein 'Magic' for Easy Dieting

By Ida Jean Kain

Going on a diet with clenched teeth and grim determination builds up resistance—to dieting. You feel disgruntled at every calorie restriction.

Try to get a new slant on calories. They aren't responsible for taking all the joy out of eating. Calories are not fattening—how could they be? They are only a unit of measure.

So instead of being mad at calories and suspecting them of lurking in all your favorite foods, get a friendly feeling toward them. Think of the calorie as the magic yardstick which can help to control your weight.

Juggle Your Menus

By using this yardstick, you can juggle the menus to include many of your favorite foods and still call on stored fat for energy. That's the way fat is lost. Counting calories can be exciting when it means more to eat while reducing.

And don't overlook the miracle of high-powered calories. Protein foods provide dynamic calories that speed up the metabolism and burn fat faster. As one reducer put it, the protein calories help subtract from the total calories.

You can lose weight more quickly on a low calorie diet that is high in protein than you can on the very same number of calories but with less protein. It's magic. . . .

It won't do any harm to be a bit antagonistic toward food fats, since the calorie yardstick reveals that fats are 2¼ times as fattening as the other nutrients. The fats include mayonnaise, cream sauces, whole cream, butter, fat of meat and gravy.

Which Can You Spare?

To keep happy on a diet, go over the list of fatteners and decide which you will miss the least. Would you prefer salad dressing or gravy? Butter on bread or on the vegetable . . . or cream in your coffee? Dieting isn't a case of doing without everything you like.

It's a choice. And when the balance of the food selection is from lean meat, eggs and cheese, and a variety of low-starch vegetables and fruits, the calories are bound to be on the svelte side—and so is your figure.

If you take the attitude that this pattern of eating is truly an amazing science, and are delighted with the results, then reducing is a privilege . . . and keeping slim will be a pleasure.

How to Clean Chandeliers

Can you tell me how to clean crystal chandeliers? Also, how to clean the prisms and give them sparkle. I have tried various things, but nothing has proved satisfactory. J. O. H.

Usually chandeliers are made so they can be taken apart for cleaning. Examine yours to see if the prisms, strings of beads, etc., are not attached by hooks and so can be easily removed. If this is possible, remove and wash them in warm water to which a little ammonia has been added. The ammonia will give them a sparkle. Polish dry. Be sure to remove and wash only a small number at a time, replacing them completely before removing any more. It would be wise to figure out if there are any parts which are not removable before you start washing so that these can be washed and dried on the fixture before you start cleaning the removable parts. In this way the parts of the fixture which are clean will not be spotted in cleaning nonremovable parts.

My little boy got hold of a discarded paint can somehow and consequently has put some of it on a brown corduroy jacket. Is there anything that you can tell me that would remove this paint? Have tried turpentine without result. C. H.

Try this: soften the paint by rubbing colorless vaseline or shortening into it. So that the fat will penetrate into the material and to break the paint surface, rub the stained material with the fat on it between the fingers. Let stand 30 minutes continuing to rub it occasionally. At the end of the 30 minutes, sponge thoroughly with carbon tetrachloride to remove fat and paint. If this removes some of the paint but not all, repeat the entire treatment.

Many thanks to N.B.H., L.M.L., A.M.L., L.A.D., R.E.J., M.H.P. and A.E.C., all of whom were kind enough to send in recipes for parsnip wine. (A. E. C. adds a note "Don't make later than February.") One of the recipes sent in follows and the rest are being forwarded to the reader who made the original inquiry.

Parsnip Wine

1½ quarts ground parsnips
1 gallon cold water

Put these together and let come to the boiling point. Boil for 1 hour. Strain through cheesecloth and measure. To each gallon of liquid, add:

2 pounds of sugar

Stir until thoroughly dissolved. When lukewarm, add for each gallon of liquid:

½ yeast cake

Before adding, dissolve yeast in warm water with a little sugar in it. Place the whole mixture in jug or similar vessel, large enough not to "work over." Also, have some besides to refill with as it "works down." During this period, add the following for each 5 gallons of liquid:

3 pounds seeded raisins
3 large oranges
(juice and grated rind only)

To this, you add lots of patience to withstand the temptation of sampling it under 6 to 12 months from date of its origination.

There is a gift shop in the 8200 block of Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, that carries glass domes 6 by 3½ inches which one of your readers requested in Sunday's paper, also the Salem china that another reader requested this week.

I have a pink corduroy dress which had no washing instructions when I bought it. I have been told that it can be washed, but I would hate to wash it if dry cleaning would do a nicer job. On the other hand, I would hate to have it cleaned if washing would be more satisfactory. I would very much appreciate your advice on the best way to launder this dress. D. W. M.

Corduroy can be either washed or dry cleaned, but because steam pressing, done by a professional will retain the just-like-new appearance, I recommend dry cleaning for this dress. The straight areas of corduroy can be pressed quite satisfactorily from the wrong side with a hand iron, but it is difficult to press the seams and lined places around neck, sleeves and hem this way.

Another idea is to wash the dress at home in lukewarm water and a mild soap and then take it to a dry cleaner to have it steam pressed. When the dress is washed, rinse several times, wring and then shake it vigorously to remove as many wrinkles as possible. Hang wrong side out on an unfinished wooden or padded hanger to dry.

Is there something which can be used to stiffen black eyelet embroidery besides starch so it won't be streaked with white? E. M.

The best plan is to add enough black dye to regular laundry starch and color it and thus prevent white streaks. Be sure that the starch is without lumps before adding the dye.

What would loosen Scotch tape from a wall covered with oil cloth? C. H.

Wet the top with carbon tetrachloride, kerosene or turpentine and allow to stand an hour or so to penetrate. During the soaking period, rewet the tape several times to keep it damp. When thoroughly soaked, the tape should pull off readily.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Youngsters in their 'teens, are very likely to express their ideas about parents' behavior if they are given a chance. Younger children are perhaps less likely to do so. Honest opinions from either age group should be valuable in helping us see ourselves.

Recently 276 boys in Children's Village, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., an institution for boys who have gotten into difficulty, expressed some of their ideas about parental behavior. They, for the most part, came from homes where there had been unwise parental handling. Because in a sense they are the "experts" having "gone through the mill," their ideas have a particular value.

Truthfulness was highest on the boys' scale. Ninety-eight per cent of them put this high on the list of desirable characteristics. Next came honesty, justice, courteousness and "a quiet voice."

Nagging was most disliked. Next in order of unpopular parental behavior came forgetting promises, fussiness, and a complaining nature. Finally, too much exhibition of affection in public was listed.

How do you think you would "stack" up? It's something to think about.

Phone Union Status Hearing Set Friday

The Baltimore regional office of National Labor Relations Board has called a preliminary hearing for Friday on the question of employe representation raised by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Washington, Maryland, and Virginia against three divisions of the Communication Workers of America—CIO.

The issue was raised last week after the CWA gave up its independent status and voted to take its 24 Bell System locals into the CIO.

The three CWA units defending their right to continue representing the employes are Division 36, which covers the plant, commercial, accounting, and engineering personnel of C. & P. in metropolitan Washington; Division 16, representing commercial and accounting employes of C. & P. in Maryland; and Division, 33, represening plant, commercial, accounting, traffic and engineering employes of C. & P. in Virginia.

Washington Division 50, which includes the operators in the Washington area, has agreed to have new dues-deduction cards signed by its membership to prove to C. & P. here that it represents a majority of the hello girls.

The question of representation has also been raised by Western Electric, a Bell System unit, against two CWA locals at Point Breeze, Md. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL, has also entered this dispute, claiming the right to represent the production, maintenance men and guards at the plant.

'Malfeasance'
Chief Ousted By Rubber Union Board

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS
Buckmaster — Lloyd
Deposed union head and successor

Philadelphia, May 24 (AP).—Leland Stanford Buckmaster was thrown out today as president of the CIO Rubber Workers Union.

The 13-member union executive board, which convicted him of malfeasance in office, said it suspended Buckmaster indefinitely. This means, a union spokesman said, Buckmaster has been fired.

It was the latest move in an internal squabble in the 180,000-member union that evoked a riot at Pottstown, Pa., last March.

May Appeal Decision

Buckmaster may appeal the decision to the union membership at its Toronto convention next September.

Buckmaster retorted that the "whole trial was conducted in an unfair manner." He said the decision wasn't based on union law but "entirely upon political motives."

The 55-year-old union leader, a founder of the Rubber Workers international 14 years ago, is recognized as a leader of the right-wing faction of the union.

He was elected by a two-vote margin last year over George Bass of Akron, who accused Buckmaster of lack of militancy.

Moving up to replace Buckmaster as president of the union is H. R. Lloyd of Akron, former vice president. Lloyd promptly issued a statement saying "employers and Communists" may attempt to take advantage of the union rift.

Warns Both Groups

But, said Lloyd, "I warn both groups that we will not tolerate any interference" in union affairs.

He said the union will stick to its guns in its demands for "a 25-cent-an-hour wage increase, company-financed pensions of $100 a month and improved health and welfare services."

The executive board followed its ouster of Buckmaster by reinstating Robert Garber as president of Local 336 in Pottstown. Buckmaster had dismissed Garber from his post.

Humphrey for Plant Seizure

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) yesterday proposed a somewhat new approach to the problem of national emergency strikes.

Humphrey, one of the leading liberals in Congress although serving his first year, suggested giving the President the authority to make a complete seizure of a plant or mine in case of a strike which threatened the national health or safety.

Seizure has been suggested before, but for the first time Humphrey spelled out publicly what other pro-labor members of Congress have been discussing privately. The Government would take over the involved plant or industry lock, stock and barrel, including the profits and loss while running it.

Only for Extreme Emergency

A similar seizure provision—as a substitute for the Taft-Hartley Act's 80-day injunction-enforced cooling-off period—is being discussed in both chambers, and some of the Democratic members of the House Labor Committee have been sounding each other out on the proposal.

Humphrey was the second Democratic member of the Senate Labor Committee to mention the possibility of a seizure provision. He would see to it that it could be put into operation only in the most extreme emergency, after every other means of settling the strike, or threatening strike, had failed.

The Minnesotan also disclosed yesterday that if it appeared impossible to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act with the Administration's Thomas-Lesinski bill—which restores the Wagner Act with "improvements"—he would be willing to go along with three other adjustments:

1. Making it a mutual obligation for employers and unions to bargain in good faith.
2. Requiring financial reports from both unions and management.
3. Writing out, in detail, a free speech guarantee.

Over the week-end Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) said he might favor seizure powers for the President in the case of emergency strikes; and earlier, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor agreed to accept such a provision, so long as it was limited in period.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), who has proposed a number of amendments to the Labor Relations Act he write, would deal with national emergency strikes through the injunction, seizure, and the special attention of Congress.

Manwhile, Representative Kelley (D., Pa.) made it clear he was not leaving Washington to attend a meeting of the International Labor Organization in Switzerland, but would stay here to be on hand to vote with the Fair Deal members of the House Labor Committee. The committee is split 13-12 and Kelley's vote is needed to get a new Taft-Hartley repealer bill to the floor of the House.

Kelley's may also be the crucial vote on the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill. Hearings on this bill will be completed this week.

Representative Powell (D., N. Y.), who is conducting the hearings on FEPC, said yesterday his subcommittee would have legislation in shape to go to the full committee next week. He predicted there would be just enough votes in the committee to squeeze the bill through for action in the House by the middle of next month.

While a musician's life probably is as complete with day-to-day toil and trouble as that of persons in more prosaic occupations, difficulties occasionally arise that are peculiar to the trade.

Duffy

For instance, the situation that confronts Johnny Smith, the drummer who, with bass fidler Ted Alexander, points up the piano work of Evalyn Tyner at the Statler Hotel's Embassy Room these nights.

And that's something that creates a stir every time the Tyner trio takes over from George Duffy and his orchestra on the Embassy Room's podium.

Duffy, you see, has a drummer named "Army" Armstrong, who pounds 'em with right-arm delivery. Portsider Smith sets the beat for Miss Tyner on the same drums Armstrong uses.

Which means that six times a night, before and after each of the Tyner trio's three appearances, Smith switches the drums around to facilitate his efforts, and then switches them back for "Army's" style.

Then, too, there's the problem orchestra leader Duffy is trying to solve. He's a tennis fan. Pretty good, too. Can't get in enough time at it.

Because he works nights, he's free days. But most people work days. Duffy can't find, as a consequence, enough tennis partners to give him a workout.

The opening dates for the Shoreham Hotel's terrace and the Roger Smith Hotel's Starlite Roof have been set.

The Shoreham's terrace, shining with a new paint job, eye-catching with some new landscape work here and there, opens Friday night, coincident with the summer closing of the Blue Room.

Featured this week at the Shoreham are Del-O-Del, the gal w has turned her normal female's bag of tricks into the repertoire of an excellent magician; the Talbots, a dance team, and Charles Carrier, who sports a fast juggling routine.

The Roger Smith's Starlite Roof, we're told, will open June 10. Dance music will be supplied by a New York band—name not yet available.

Five-year-old Brenda Bassin, daughter of Max Bassin, operator of the cheese blintzes emporium at 1347 E st. nw., is going around these days with a big question on her mind.

When she was a trusting 2-year-old, her grandfather, in a magnanimous gesture, made her a present of the Atlantic Ocean. "It's all yours," he told her. She accepted in the same spirit, and since then she's had much to say about "my ocean."

After three years of undisputed possession, however, a thought popped into her mind the other day. "Where," she asked her mother, "did grandfather get the Atlantic Ocean?"

Mrs. Bassin, who knows a tight spot when she's in one, suggested Brenda ask the man who gave it to her. She's going to, next time she sees him.

Union, Ford Meet Today

Detroit, May 24 (AP).—Union terms for arbitration of the key issue in the 20-day Ford strike drew a conditional thumbs-down today from the Ford Motor Co.

Further peace talks, however, were set for tomorrow (2:30 p. m. E.S.T.) after the company invited the CIO United Auto Workers to resume negotiations and the union accepted.

Ford, in a telegram to UAW President Walter Reuther, said the union had not "properly stated the question" in its surprise arbitration proposal Monday night. Wednesday's session presumably will be devoted to working out satisfactory arbitration procedure.

Reuther had suggested that the problem dealing with allocation of manpower on disputed assembly lines in the company's Rouge and Detroit Lincoln-Mercury plant be left to a mutually acceptable third party.

Quiz Urged On Charge of Press Sellout

San Francisco, May 24 (AP). Lowell Jessen, president of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association, said today he had asked the Department of Justice to investigate accusations "challenging the integrity of our newspapers."

He said papers in California had been accused, in widely circulated charges, of selling editorial support to the State Medical Association for 100 inches of advertising.

"This, said Jessen, "is ludicrous on the face of it."

Jessen, publisher of the Turlock Journal, said the essence of the accusations was that California newspapers had "sold out" to the medical groups two years ago to the extent that Governor Warren's health program was defeated.

He said that during the campaign the medical association did place some advertising with most California papers, but that editors were not even asked to support the groups editorially.

Loyalty Test 'Holes' Worry Richardson

The head of the Federal Loyalty Review Board yesterday declared the board is "getting curvature of the spine leaning backward" in assessing the loyalty of Federal Government employes.

Seth W. Richardson, board chairman, told a luncheon meeting of the American Veterans Committee, that his concern was not over damaging the reputations of Federal workers through the program, but rather that "we made the holes in the nets too big."

Noting that the program has been attacked because it did not provide employes under fire with the right of cross-examination and confrontation of those making charges, he said the workers are given protections under the program that they never had before.

Until the program was adopted, employes could be discharged by merely furnishing them with written charges against them and no hearings procedure was set up, he declared. Under the loyalty program each employe has the right to hearings by his departmental loyalty board, a second one before his department head and then a final one before Richardson's board.

Richardson, a veteran attorney who served as Assistant Attorney General during the Hoover Administration, outlined several changes which he had unsuccessfully proposed in the loyalty program:

1. "I regret sometimes that we can't shift personnel to less sensitive posts" when a clear case of disloyalty has not been made. He said this was done in England.

2. Giving the board the right to subpena witnesses.

PONTIA

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Parking Problem Has Its Brighter Side

It's a good thing I have a car, to help me keep in trim. Every day I get in a nice brisk constitutional as I walk from the closest parking place to the office.

ADD DEFINITIONS

"Second helping:" What a little boy thinks he's going to want just before he's served his first helping.

THE SMILE WEARS WELL

Nominations for Washington's most handsome men (to replace the list of bigshots selected by Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer) are still coming in.

Some are nice big photos, like the one below, which was accompanied by a note which said:

"I haven't seen any candidate in your handsome man contest who provides any competition for my doctor, Dr. Bruce I. Shnider of 5924 9th st. nw."

When you read the signature on that letter, you suspect that Dr. Shnider's champion is just a wee bit prejudiced in his favor. It's from his missus.

Incidentally, she adds: "In case I sound like a newlywed—I'm not. I've enjoyed looking at him across the breakfast table for 7 years."

Yeah, yeah—I know. An apple a day keeps the doctor away, but a little applesauce keeps any husband contentedly at home.

Incidentally, some of the photos which have come in have been a bit too small to do justice to the nominees.

FRANK

For example, Dorothea Elliott of 1606 14th st. nw. says that we mustn't overlook Frank Van Buskirk who works for the Veterans' Administration.

From what I can see of Frank, he's a likely looking lad for this type of competition. But the picture is so small that it's hard to be sure.

So if any more nominee photos are still en route, please see that they include what our photographers delight in calling "a good head shot"—in other words, a likeness of the face which is at least 1-inch wide, and preferably wider.

As soon as all precincts have been heard from, we'll publish all the pictures.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Healthy, beautiful mother cat and two 8-week-old kittens, full of fun." (District 0198 after 6 p. m.)

"Small female dog and four pups; thoroughbred mongrels." (Adams 1287 after 6 p. m.)

"Housebroken kitten, 6 weeks old; you'll love her. Puppies will be ready for adoption in 3 weeks." (Falls Church 2306 or Elmwood 672.)

"Little ball of gray fur, in form of 6-week-old kitten." (Sligo 9491.)

"Three nice kittens, 3 weeks old." (Michigan 0104.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Don H. Williams, 727 Chestnut ave., Falls Church, Va.: You and I seem to be the only ones who like Barnaby.

LET'S GET TOGETHER, BOYS

Senator Pepper has proposed that a car pool be established to provide transportation for Congressmen who "can't always get a taxi when they want one."

However the local hackers complain that there are now so many cabs on the street that nobody can make a decent living any more, so they want legislation to limit the number of cabs to "those actually needed."

Right off hand, I'd say there seems to be a slight difference of opinion on the subject.

SLOW BUT SURE

The announcement that auto prices are being reduced $10 to $40 leads me to suspect that whatever goes up must come down—but not necessarily at the same rate of speed.

OVERHEARD

"You say that to my face, but would you say it behind my back?"

FROM WHERE I STAND

World events, affairs of State,
Treaties, some new potentate,
Jets, research in atoms, time,
All march on with Fate, while I'm
Adding nothing to the fuss;
(I've been waiting for a bus).

E. Culbreth.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman Banters With Barkley

By Drew Pearson

President Truman and Vice President Barkley enjoyed some good-natured banter when Secretary of State Acheson left for the Paris conference. Both went to the airport to see Acheson off, Truman arriving first in dark semi-diplomatic clothes, Barkley a few moments later wearing white flannels.

Pearson

"Hey, V. P.," said Truman, hailing the Vice President, "what did you do, forget to put on your pants this morning?"

Barkley merely grinned.

When the Secretary of State waved from the step of the Paris-bound plane, the President said goodbye, but Barkley shouted, "Bon voyage!"

"What was that?" asked the President, with a kidding look at Barkley.

"I said 'Bon voyage!'" Barkley replied.

Hailing French Ambassador Henri Bonnet who was nearby, the President made the Vice President repeat his French farewell so the Ambassador could check his pronunciation.

"V. P., I think you're just trying to show off," concluded Truman, as Acheson flew away.

State Dept. Spanking

Warren Austin, popular United States delegate to the United Nations, is now in the State Department doghouse—for disobeying orders.

Secretary Acheson is furious at him for deliberately ignoring instructions on what to do when the question of admitting Israel came up before the United Nations Assembly. The Israelis were in flagrant violation of mediation orders from the U. N., so Acheson felt it was only proper for them to cool their heels at Lake Success.

Just before the vote, therefore, he sent Austin a four-page telegram carefully instructing him to vote for the admission of Israel but not to make any speeches supporting its admission.

Austin, however, paid no attention to these instructions. Instead, he made a strong speech championing the Israeli cause and, in addition, buttonholed dozens of foreign delegates, urging them to vote for Israel. His one-man campaign was such a success that the new Jewish state was admitted as the 59th member of the United Nations. Acheson is now trying to figure out what to do with the former Senator from Vermont for disobeying orders.

GOP Senator Balks

The GOP economy drive tripped over Minnesota's Senator Ed Thye the other day—and lost some of its momentum.

At a closed meeting of Republican Senators, Thye had a few things to say about the 5 per cent across-the-board appropriation cuts. It didn't make sense, he argued, for Senators to plead for more money from the Appropriations Committee — sometimes privately—then turn round and vote a 5 per cent cut—publicly.

"Few of you," Thye waggled a finger at his colleagues, "haven't appeared before the Appropriations Committee and requested special appropriations. You were very grateful when your request was granted and wired your home folks to tell them about it."

Then these same Senators came up on the floor and voted an overall 5 per cent cut, chided the former Governor of Minnesota. Whacking off a straight 5 per cent is a most careless way of trimming the budget, he added.

Note: Missouri's Senator Forrest Donnell added his amen to Thye's arguments, pointed out that soon everyone would simply ask for 5 per cent more if the Senate continued its arbitrary 5 per cent cuts.

Dulles Turns Franco Tide

Secretary Acheson was hauled over the coals by the Senate Appropriations Committee just before he left for Paris by Senators who wanted to know why the American delegation to the United Nations refused to vote for Franco Spain.

Acheson told the Appropriations Committee, whose job incidentally is not primarily concerned with foreign policy, that the United States delegation had acted on instructions from the State Department. Senator Wherry pointedly tried to get Acheson to admit that there was a division in the American delegation to the U. N. on the issue.

Actually, Wherry was right. There was a major split inside the American delegation at the United Nations, and the voting was three to two against Franco. Favoring the Spanish dictator were chief U. N. Delegate Austin and Ray Atherton. On the other side were Mrs. Roosevel and Ben Cohen. The deciding vote was cast by a surprising figure, John Foster Dulles—who voted against Franco.

Capital News Capsules

Good Paris omen—Secretary Acheson, arriving in Paris, was encouraged to find that the Russians were sending the largest delegation in recent history to the Paris conference—74 experts. This is considered a good omen. The presence of a large delegation means the Russians are prepared to give and take on any issue that might be raised, without too much reference back to Moscow.

Atomic Energy Row—A backstage row over atomic energy information has broken out inside the Senate Appropriations Committee. Three Republicans—Senators Wherry, Bridges and Ferguson—asked the committee staff to dig up some technical data. But the subcommittee chairman, Democratic Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, countermanded the order. He told the committee clerks that anything the Republicans wanted to know must be cleared with him.
